Works of prolific artist shown in 1-woman exhibit

Anne Exanthippe George, a Westland resident and member of Farmington Artists Club, will show her work in a one-person exhibit in Farmington Branch Library through the month of May.

The artist estimated she has sold, donated or given away more than 1,000 paintings she has completed in her basement in the past 15 years and has "at least a hundred or two" she is now working on.

George likes to quote Gloria Vanderbilt, who once said she couldn't conceive of anything more heavenly than spending her latter years in a lovely garden, painting.

"I'm ready for that bloomin' garden," George said.

"To bring one's imagination to glory and fruition among lush greenery and splendid color fit for a luxury-loving butterfly is a creative person's dream."

"But I've become accustomed to an old setting and much convenience in my basement."

Farmington Branch Library is located at State and Liberty streets in downtown Farmington.
