Course offerings are available

Michigan State University is offering more than 50 undergraduate courses in southeast Michigan this summer, beginning the week of June 22. While most courses will be offered at MSU's Southeast Regional Center, 20500 W. 13 Mile Road at Evergreen (Groves High School), courses will also be offered in Dearborn, Detroit, Bloomfield Hills and West Bloomfield.

Students can earn credit in required areas such as American Thought and Language, Humanities and Social Science.

A wide variety of more advanced coursework will also be offered by the colleges of Arts and Letters, Business, Communications Arts and Sciences, Education, Engineering, Human Ecology, Natural Science, Social Science and James Madison College.

All credits earned will appear on a transcript in East Lansing, as if they had been taken on campus.

Interested persons can receive a complete listing of MSU summer courses in southeastern Michigan by calling 313-645-5410.

The award was granted to Hanson in recognition of her efforts in planning, researching and developing several programs designed to strengthen and maintain attachments within the childbearing family. Some of the programs in which she has been instrumental are: childbirth preparation classes for teen parents, barrier free childbirth education for the hearing and sight impaired and infant stimulation classes entitled, "Babies Are People Too."

Hanson is a graduate of Henry Ford Hospital School of Nursing in Detroit.

She received a nursing degree from Madonna College in Livonia and an master's degree in parent-child nursing from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Science student tours offered
