BIRMINGHAM'S annual Michigan Week parade and art fair promise to be better than ever this year, thanks to the city's 50th anniversary celebration.

"Happy Birthday Birmingham" is the theme of this year's Michigan Week parade, an event which dates well back into Birmingham's history as a city.

"As close as we can figure out, the parade is in its 35th year," said Jim Scoo, parade chairman. "That's a lot longer than most people realize."

Scoo said that the parade has been sponsored for the past 35 years by the Birmingham Jaycees. This year will be no different. A group of almost three dozen Jaycees have been working on the event since November.

THE PARADE, which will begin at 11 a.m. Saturday, will start on Woodward at Harmon Street, winding up at Shain Park downtown. Residents who follow the parade to the park will find 100 artists gathered as part of the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association's annual Mayfair.

Scoo said that this year's parade will feature more than 1,300 participants.
