

Air show

World champion pilots will demonstrate the 12-foot-long Micro-jet traveling at 300 mph and the engineless sail plane on Saturday and Sunday, June 4 and 5, during the Michigan Air Show and Bluegrass Festival at Pontiac Airport.

Betty Stewart, a world champion pilot, will fly a modified Pitts Special at the Pontiac Airport air show. She is the first person in the 21-year history of the World Aerobatic contests to twice win the world championship.

See Traditional Values Grow with Space, Economy and Wood

Recent market research shows greater home value means maximum space, operating economy and quality construction—features you will find in the Pulte Wood Award Home.

Traditional Design with Added Space

More living space means extra value. And, almost fifty percent more living area has been added with a warm, dry fully insulated treated wood basement. Usable space for year round living.

A House Built to Save Energy

Ample insulation within the wood frame walls and ceilings, plus insulated wood windows, limits cold area penetration and heat loss. The result: home operating economy. You'll have greater comfort and up to 50 percent lower heating costs.

The Value and Beauty of Wood

A wood home provides strength and durability. But more, it has the warmth and appeal only wood can provide. A handsome wood exterior. A wood deck. A beamed family room, fireplace and wood accent paneling. By any measure, the Award Home adds up to quality and value. It has received the American Wood Council's Design for Better Living Award. Visit this home today.
