Tom Panzenhagen

"True Grit" (1969), 9:30 a.m. Sunday on Ch. 4. Originally 128 minutes.

It's Western Week (even with the inclusion of "Brannigan," which is a western at heart), and topping it off is "True Grit," the film for which John Wayne won an Oscar as best actor. Wayne's performance is memorable, if not distinguished, and the film, in which Wayne plays an aging sheriff who manages a last burrah (ignoring for a moment the sequel to the film, which airs Tuesday night), is quite entertaining. Henry Hathaway, veteran director of such earlier Wayne vehicles as "North to Alaska" and "The Sons of Katie Elder," allows Gary a full moment, which compensates for one of the worst performances in film history, turned in here by Glen Campbell. Kim Darby, Robert Duvall, Strother Martin and Dennis Hopper also star.

Rating: $3.10.
 "The Big Country" (1958), 3:30 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2. Originally 166 minutes.
 Gregory Peck, Jean Simmons and Charlton Heston star in this expansive western that's as long as the sky out west is big. Yet director William Wyler's "Big Country" is rarely dull and always a pleasure to watch. The emphasis is on thought rather than action in this laconic film.

 Rating: $3.15.

"Rooster Cogburn" (1975), 2 Wednesday night on Ch. 4. Originally 107 minutes.

One of Wayne's less-regrettable efforts of his later years is "Rooster Cogburn," the sequel to "True Grit," which co-stars Katharine Hepburn. But that's not to say it's a very good film, either. The unlikely teaming of Wayne and Hepburn makes this a pretentious film that's slow-paced and short on action in the hands of director Stuart Millar. But the character of Sheriff Rooster Cogburn is one of Wayne's finest efforts, and that alone makes this a picture worth seeing.
 Rating: $2.70.
