

Easy to read: caring and sharing

Dear Mrs. Green:

As you can see I am well known for my penmanship. . . all had Secretaries hate me, relatives hope I don't write, I even have trouble reading what I wrote two weeks ago. I am 54 years old and right handed.

This satisfies a temptation and curiosity I have had for some time to write to you and find out if there is any significance beyond that I am a sign writer.

L.S. Farmington

Dear L.S.:

I enjoyed your letter. There are many factors that can contribute to illegibility in one's handwriting. Barring a physical malady, they can be: too much speed, problems with communication or a lack of consideration for the reader. There are some signs of quick writing here, but I'll let you fill in the blanks.

Your heavy pressure tells me that you have a great deal of vitality for the things you wish to accomplish. Determination is also present.

The desire to own and possess is strong. This need for tangible things may represent love and security to you. You can be sharing, caring and flexible with those who are close to you. I think you are rather selective of your friends. Those who share similar interests probably have the most appeal. Activities which take you out of doors may be enjoyable to you.

You are not always predictable. Feelings of self-esteem seem to waver at times. Possibly you are more con-dent in the performance of your job than in relationships. Your ideas of what a woman should be seem to be rather narrow. In this day of women's lib, this could conceivably present problems.

There is a strong need to protect your ego. When threatened you can be sarcastic and may become argumentative.

Being an emotional person you depend on the environment a great deal for fulfillment and happiness. Emotions can vacillate quickly also. You enjoy flattery and recognition. Criticism can be devastating, and it might be difficult for you to conceal your feelings as body language is definitely a part of you.

There is a private side to you. Things you do not care to share you just don't discuss. At times you may paint the picture other than it is.

Your mind is probing and curious. Often you grasp ideas or concepts very rapidly with little need for explanation. Other times you choose to analyze in depth and arrive at your own opinions after thorough investigation. There is skill in putting your ideas together.

Please note: If you care to give me objective feedback on your analysis, I will share it with the readers. Please send your letters to Mrs. Lorene Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Please use a full sheet of white unlined paper in the first person singular. Age and handedness are also helpful.
