U-M Awards Record Degrees

The University of Michigan awarded 8,881 degrees last year—723 more than the previous year—according to a summary just prepared by the Registrar's Office.

The report, which covers the period between July 1, 1967, and June 30, 1968, lists 4,292 bachelor's degrees, 3,015 master's degrees, 548 doctorates, and 1,026 graduate professional degrees.

In addition to the 8,881 earned degrees, there were 48 honorary degrees—an unusually high number because of the 1967 U-M Sesquicentennial celebration.

IN ALL there were 102 separate degrees in 214 academic and professional fields. Some of the degrees—such as bachelor of science in applied mathematics—were given only to a few students. Ten degrees were awarded to no more than one student each.

But there were also 1,969 bachelor of arts degrees and 1,268 master of arts degrees, the most common.

The largest number of degrees in a single field was in business administration, 636. There were 611 in education and 497 in English. These include degrees at all levels and degrees awarded by the Dearborn Campus and Flint College as well as schools on the Ann Arbor campus.

Most of the degrees, 4,784, were awarded at spring commencement in April. There were 2,349 awarded last August and 1,778 awarded in December.

Men outnumbered women degree recipients, 5,479 to 3,402. But at the bachelor's level the figures were close, 3,274 men and 2,018 women. Many more men than women received master's, doctorate, and professional degrees.
