

Outward poise is evident in her style

Dear Mrs. Green:

This is only the second time I have read your column in the Eccentric. The first time I wanted to write that never did, this time I ansince I was so fascinated with your articles and found that handwriting actually says something about the person. I enjoy anything to do with writing in pen or penell.

Furthermore, I would be very interested in knowing whay my bandwriting reveals about myself. Thank you.

C.L. Union Lake

Dear C.L.:
Your neat, upright handwriting portrays a young women who is outwardly polsed, one who does not reveal feelings freely in her body language.
Most of her decisions are predicated more on intellect than emotion. She does not rush into them quickly, but takes time to decide how the matter will affect her personally before becoming involved.
Neat and orderly would also describe her. And she likes a place for everything and everything in its place.
Discipline is something with which she is familiar. She knows what needs

This is only the second time a column in "The Eccentric" Dontad to write but never di Since I was so fascinated with Lound that ha ture. But let no one understimate the writer's ability to stand up and be counted when she feels this is necesto be done and does it. While all necessary aspects of a task are handled with time on the things are used.

She is probably known for her dependability. People have learned she can be counted on to do a commendable job when she assumes a task. She probably strives for perfection always. And currently she appears to be quite involved.

Basically she has a peace-loving na-

'People have learned she can be counted on to do a commendable job .'

She is aware of proper decorum for her social set. Still, with the fantasy suggested by those full lower loops, I can almost see her performing and embellishing for the attention it brings. In social interaction she is often direct. But there is also tack here to lend charm to her personality. At times the seems to underestimate here capabilities by setting goals that are not challenging enough. Someone once sald, "Reach for the moon, if you miss you will still fall among the stars."

counted when she feels this is necessary.

Hope she has learned to rely on her hunches, as a bit of intuition is here to furnish some of the answers.

FORMATIVE YEARIS were spent in a female-dominated home. Some of her early traditions and values have been carly traditions and values have been out for new vistas.

If you have a question about your handwriting, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Please use full stead of white, unlined paper, writing in the first person singular, que and handedness are also helpout for new vistas.
