Child care hearings on tap

Michigan Women's Commission will hold a public hearing on child care 2-4 p.m. and 7-9 p.m. Monday, Oct. 17, in UAW Solidarity House, 8000 E. Jefferson, Detraid care has become the economic priority for "Child care has become the economic priority for women," said Geraldine DeFant of Marquette, commission member and chair of the child care protect.

"In many cases, the avZilability of quality, af-fordable child care can make the difference as to sufficient."

The increasing demand for child care has resulted from changes in family structure and work patterns. Rocest studies indicate that 20 percent of all children are living in one-parent families and in two-parent homebodis more than 50 percent of the mothers work outside the home.

The Detroit hearing is the fifth in a series of six to be held statewide

Once the hearings are completed, the temmission will prepare a report to Gov. James Blanchard on its flames. The commission will then work with the legislates and affected state departments to implement the so stend in person may send written complete the standard of the standard of the comment of the standard of the stan

Avoidance of future shock is seminar's aim

Futuring — or what used to be called long-range anning — is being used now by individuals and reportations as a way of seeing the larger picture should be future about orporations as a way or seeing the sarger picture of avoiding future shock.

Oakland University's Continuum Center will offer its nearly developed futuring workshop 11 am. > 2 pm. Mondays beginning Oct. 10 in Auburn iclights. "Designing Your Future" principles can be polited in a marriage, on the job, in corporate planing, handling finances, in deciding what to do next and in dealing with kids and friends. Fee for the four-session workshop is $45. To register call the Continuum Center at 377-3033.

Co-leaders of the workshop are career counselor Judith Hoppin of Birmingham and psychotheraplat Judith Schneider of Franklin. Hoppin also uses futuring technicques in counsel-ing people who are out of jobs. "One of the goals of futuring is to help people value and build on their past experiences and then fuse that knowledge with their dreams and fantatics about the future—dreams that are often discounted but which actually hold a lot of power," she said.

"Futuring in this way seems to give people a greater sense of control and a realization that what they do everyday as individuals does have being cancer. In a corporate setting, futuring helps provide a balance between the creative visionary and the more practical realistic thinkers."
