

Renaissance City series keeps ticket prices low

By Avigdor Zarom

At one time or another, each of us searches for bargains and savings. In most cases, a cheap price implies some compromise in quality.

But every rule has an exception (except for the rule stated at the beginning of this sentence). One exception is the Renaissance Concerts series at Orchestra Hall.

The man behind this series is Misha Rakhlevsky of West Bloomfield, violinist with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra (DSO). The 15-concert Orchestra Hall series is only one of his endeavors, that includes a weekly Friday "Nightcap with Mozart," as well as a series at the Edsel Ford House and appearances in other locations.

The Orchestra Hall series features chamber groups of various sizes, consisting mostly of DSO players. One such group, the Renaissance City Chamber Orchestra, has just returned from its first international tour to Jordan. It continues to draw more interest outside the immediate area.

In addition, there are many guest performers, including several pianists from the University of Michigan School of Music in Ann Arbor. One of them, Jonathan Shames, was a finalist in the Tchaikovsky competition in Moscow a little over a year ago.

Another prominent pianist featured this season will be Ilse von Alpenheim. Besides being the wife of Maestro Artur Dorati, she is an internationally acclaimed pianist in her own right.

AMONG the local prominent talents is Italo Babbini, principal cellist with the DSO, whose skill is on par with prominent international soloists. Then, of course, there is Rakhlevsky himself, who, together with Babbini and Shames, forms a most exciting trio.

For a series of 18 attractive programs one could expect to pay a hefty price.

To be sure, there has been a price increase with a single ticket price at $4 instead of $3 last year. However, any selection of four concerts can be purchased for $14, any selection of eight for $24 and the entire series for $40 which is the same last season. This schedule could produce some mathematical dilemmas.

For example, if one is attracted for some reason to the unlucky number 13, the price for 13 concerts would be the total of eight for $24, four for $16 and a single ticket for $4, which adds up to a total of $40, more than the series total of $40.

ONE POSSIBLE solution could be to buy all 16 tickets and give three of them away to friends, which might very well turn 13 into a lucky number.

Another alternative would be to call 62-MUSIC and try to insist on linear interpolation, which might result in a communication gap, but could be a good topic to start a conversation.

There is one more bonus that will be already missed by the time this is printed. This is a special Gala season opening party at the Roostertail, scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 4. This is offered to anybody who purchases as few as four tickets. But, even if one has missed this opportunity, the rewarding events for the rest of the season are well worth the price.

These savings at these prices, are made possible due to a grant from the Michigan Council of the Arts, sponsorship by local corporations and businesses and individual contributions. In addition, the organization has a large number of enthusiastic and eager volunteers, with room for more.

Two works appear traditionally on every opening program. These are Mozart's Klein Nachtmusik and the Toy Symphony, attributed to Haydn. Other works on opening programs this season will be the Brahms Concerto No. 4 by Bach, Divertimento from Fur Children by Bartok and Concerto for two flutes by Vivaldi. Opening night is Tuesday, Oct. 11.

Girl Scouts begin annual calendar, planner sale

Michigan Metro Girl Scouts are taking orders for wall calendars and pocket planners now for their annual calendar sale, which will be conducted with deliveries Nov. 11-12. This year the council's 26,500 Girl Scout hope to sell $10,000 calendars, breaking last year's record sale of $9,400.

The 1984 wall calendar and pocket planner are priced at $1.25 each. Both have a full square of writing space for each day of the week, with plenty of space for recording business appointments.

The annual sale helps to finance troop activities and service projects.

A successful Girl Scout calendar sale requires hard work by a large group of adult volunteers. The leaders in this area are Nancy Dittmar and Joyce Campbell from Farmington Hills; Mary Diamond and Myrna Ellsworth of Farmington, and Carolyn Greenlee of Novi.
