

Fowl are under lady's wing lies — mother, father and kids," Mutschall.

"I enjoy them (the birds) because they come to me," she adds. "There are other ponds where they could go, but they know I'm the lady with the bag of corn."

"It's a lot of work, but it's worth it. I love nature and I'm always finding some poor little crippled creature to help."

The Mutschall property also includes about an acre of wooded land, with raspberry and elderberry bushes and lots of wildflowers.

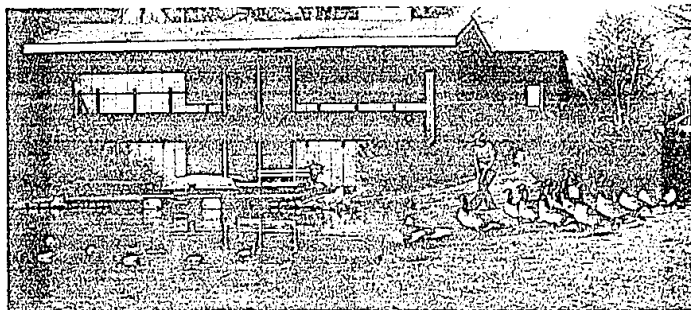

"We have wildflowers your grandchildren probably never will see," Mutschall said. "But ours will because we've protected them."

Mutschall's husband, Roland, is a purchasing agent for an electronics firm. The Mutschalls have four children, one living at home.

There are always plenty of visitors to the Mutschall home — people wondering why all those ducks are crossing the road.

"People just stop and their mouths drop open," said Mutschall. "People would have to drive to Jack Miner (a bird sanctuary near Leamington, Ont.) or to Kensington to see something like this, and I have it here in my own backyard."

Most of the ducks stay at the pond during the winter after the pond freezes over.
