RIGAUD

PARIS

The scent of a perfumed candle drifting through a room has long been one of the symbols of sophisticated and somewhat elegant living. And, for over a hundred years, the famed French perfume, Rigaud, has signified status in scent the world over. Lighting one for only 10 or 15 minutes a day sends a woody aroma of cyprus or the fragrance of wild flowers through a room. The perfect holiday gift for anyone on your list.
