FIRST COST OF FOOD A SMALL PART OF MEAL PRICE.

A farmer's club at Imbler, Ore. when informed by a caterer that it would cost them $1.40 a plate for a banquet they contemplated indulging in, got busy with pencil and paper in order to ascertain what portion of that $1.40 went to the farmers who produced the various articles of food on the bill of fare. It was found that they could duplicate the meal for 16 cents per plate, which included the cost of cooking, taking as a basis of cost the price paid them for the products. They found that out of every $1.40 paid per plate $1.24 went to the railroads, middlemen and dealers for their services and the farmer got a very small portion for his share.

When the farmers get together and demand something more than a few packages of garden seeds and bunkum from their congressman it is just possible that a different division of the $1.40 may be secured. One that will be a little more equitable and which will not cause a false in price to the consumer.

MUCH CONFUSION - LITTLE INTEREST.

The Dearborn Independent sums up the situation in the presidential contest now gathering headway in the preliminary stages as follows: "The contest for the presidency in the next election was never a more open matter than it now is, granting of course the nomination of Coolidge by the republicans. At no time during which the next election has been in view has there been so much confusion as to persons and issue, not in fact so little real interest, as they now is. Ordinarily the candidacies of Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Johnson might be matters of public interest, but it is very clear that they are not that now. No one is interested in either Mr. McAdoo or Mr. Johnson except in the one case a party that must have a candidate, and in the other case a faction that must have a leader. But even the partisan interest does not extend much beyond the bounds of the office-holding or office-seeking members of the party organization, and certainly the Johnson protest is decidedly unimportant. In fact, the country is in a frame of mind to consider the next election all but settled—all over but the voting. And the country will become more deeply persuaded of that if present events at Washington continue persistently to be given a partisan turn. The oil investigation was regarded at first as a pre-election play, with immense partisan potencies. Since the bi-partisan character of the disclosures have become clear, interest seems to have flagged."

REV. C. W. TOWNSEND

OPENING HYMN—
Lead, kindly Light, amid th' encircling gloom,
Lead Thou me on!
The night is dark and I am far from home,
Lead Thou me on!
Keep Thou my feet, I do not ask to see
The distant scene; one step enough for me.
INVOCATION—Lord, we humbly ask Thy blessing to be upon thy people at home, at church and everywhere this day. Lead us in our devotions in the Way Everlasting. Scripture, John 11:24-26.

John 11:25-26 I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. And these words were spoken to Martha, the sister of Mary and Lazarus. Jesus had often been in this Bethany home, and now he was about to leave it. Here he found the sweetest fellowship that this earth could give. When the news came to Jesus, in Perea, that his friend Lazarus was sick, he delayed his going to him for a day or two. A few days later he announced to his disciples that he was going to Bethany to awaken Lazarus from sleep. His disciples, as often, were slow to catch his meaning, saying, "If he sleeps he is doing well." Then Jesus said to them in plain words "Lazarus is dead."

Why did Jesus thus try the souls of these his dearest friends? Just as he tested the Synagogue when he healed the man with the withered foot, so here he has a larger blessing store than Martha had faith to believe. And beside all this he desired to teach the people of his day, and those who should follow after, an immortal lesson.

Jesus said to her, "Thy brother shall rise again," but she could not conceive of it as a present reality. "She had a vague belief in a future resurrection, but she was not with the Pharisees; but the thought that she should behold her brother brought back to life, before her very eyes, was overwhelming to her. Then Jesus said, 'What to mind are the most hope inspiring and encouraging words that Jesus ever uttered.' 'I am the resurrection, and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, shall live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.'"

With a reply, that shows her faith still limited, Martha slips away and secretly seeks out her sister Mary, and announces, "The Lord is come and he calleth for thee." Instantly her feet speed over the way to Jesus. When in his presence she sinks at his feet and greets him with the same sad words of grief and broken spirit as those which she had spoken to her brother had not died." Jesus observing the fast-falling tears of Mary and the Jews standing about groaned in spirit, and wept with compassion. How natural comes the simple question from the lips of Jesus, "Where have you laid him?" And how natural comes the reply, "Come and see." Then comes the releasing of grief and emotion as the shedding of tears can effect. Note just two words used by Jesus, "Jesus wept." But O, what volumes they represent!

No professional mourning with him! It was heart-felt sympathy. He was the "Man of Sorrows and acquainted with grief." O, the depths of the compassion of Jesus! Just to know that Jesus cries, and that he bids us cast our burdens upon him, how comforting it is! See the weeping party wending their way to the cave tomb of Lazarus. What! Does he require the opening of tomb? Yes! "Roll ye away the stone." Behold, he passes to his Father. Just a sentence; but in perfect confidence. That with a loud voice he cries, "Lazarus come forth!" He who was dead—pulsates with life again; but the grave wrappings must be removed. "Loose him and let him go." O the joy of that day, when the Son of God spoke life into that fast disintegrating body!

We too know that, "If our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands eternal in the Heavens."

CLOSING HYMN—

When we cross the valley there need be no shadows;
When life's day is ended and its journey o'er;
When the summons comes to meet the blessed Saviour;
When we rise to dwell with Him forevermore.

PRAYER—O Lord, thou hast made us for Thyself, and we say with the servant of old Simeon Augustine, "Our hearts are restless, till they rest in Thee." Life at best is but a brief span. So teach us then that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom. Teach us to be content with what we have, and to have an abundant entrance into Thy everlasting habitation, where we may dwell with Thee forever. This we ask in Jesus' holy name. Amen

Why Women "Honor" Men

"What psychologist's seat is it," asks the commuter of his stout mate the other morning, "that induces wives, at least some wives, to name calls after their husbands?"
"Search me," replied the other commuter. "Now I wouldn't mind a race-horse or a thoroughbred Poland China hog being named after me, but no cat. I suppose the husbands approve, or they wouldn't stand for it."
"Some do and some don't, apparently," mused the first commuter. "One of my neighbors has a cat named 'Harry.' Now the original 'Harry' left home in a huff a year ago and hasn't been seen since, but the unfortunate wife still calls her favorite cat after him. Another neighbor has a cat named 'Harriet' after her husband. This man, and his wife are devoted to each other."
"Well," suggested the other commuter, "they say it takes all kinds of people to make the world, but I think there are more kinds of wives than there are men."—New York Sun and Globe.
