MICHIGAN BELL TELEPHONE CO. EMPLOYEES LAUDED FOR HEROIC ACTS
FOUR AWARDED VAIL MEDALS
Unusual Acts in Line of Duty and Public Service Win Praise For Ten Others

Heroes of civil life, those who act, without thought of self, for the benefit of others, usually are allowed to go their prosaic way, praises unsung. But four persons, employees of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, have been named by the award committee for meritorious mention. They will receive letters of commendation from the vice president and general manager of the company, George M. Welch.

Four Awarded Vail Medal
The four employees of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company to receive the medals are: Mrs. Anna J. Hutton, operating agent, Niagara, Wis.; Arthur Warriner, exchange repairman, Iron Mountain, Mich.; Mrs. Lulu Cole, night operator, Marshall, Mich.; Winfield S. Dean, repairman, Jackson, Mich.

The ten named for honorable mention are: Miss E. Schram, supervisor, Pontiac; B. A. McLaughlin, exchange repairman, Pontiac; Don Young, switchboardman, Pontiac; L. H. Stittman, cableman, Potosky; O. A. Judd, testman, Potosky; Claude Pickett, repairman, Potosky; Charles McEachern, repairman, Bay City; Samuel E. Hayes, supervising foreman, trouble department, Detroit; A. B. Lewis, transmission inspector, Lansing and Joseph Allen, line installer, Jackson.

The date for presentation of the medals has not been announced. Shortly after the death of Theodore N. Vail, former president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and known as the "builder of the telephone," Mrs. Vail established the Vail Memorial medal fund to perpetuate the ideals her husband had established of service to the public. Each year a divisional committee selects those, who during the year have emulated the ideals of the late Mr. Vail by unusual acts of devotion to duty, regardless of self.

Town Saved From Fire
Mrs. Hutton is in charge of the exchange operated by the Michigan Bell Telephone Company at Niagara, Wisconsin. One morning, shortly after four o'clock, a flickering reflection on a metal piece on the switchboard attracted her attention. She discovered a flame from a flame spreading up the side of a building across the street.

A high wind was blowing and sending flaming sparks rocketing through the air, endangering the entire town. Mrs. Hutton at once realized the danger. Working at highest speed, she warned the members of the fire department, notified proprietors and managers of nearby stores and called all other residents who could reach by telephone, asking their aid in fighting the blaze. While she was giving the alarm, her own home in which the exchange is located caught fire, but she did not stop her work at the switchboard until the entire town had been aroused.

Then she started to save her home, using snow to extinguish the flames. In recognition of her efforts Mrs. Hutton was made a paid member of the Niagara fire department and was accorded other honors.

Quick Thinking Saves Lives
Quick thinking and equally quick acting enabled Arthur Warriner to save two lives during the year. Single-handed, he removed a heavy note that had fallen on Eloi R. Nelson, near Vulcan, Mich., and through his knowledge of first aid, revived Nelson, who was badly injured. Later he saved O. E. Eaton, telephone installer, as the latter was about to be crushed between two freight cars near the Ford body plant at Iron Mountain.

Mrs. Cole, shortly before two o'clock one morning, answered a signal on her switchboard from the office of G. E. Lamb & Son, lumber dealers at Marshall. She obtained a reply, but heard noises that aroused her suspicions. She notified the police, who investigated and found the place had been burglarized. Concussion caused by explosive used in attempting to open the safe, had knocked the telephone to the floor; the receiver falling from the hook and causing the signal to flash before Mrs. Cole.

Winfield Dean, like other telephone company employees, had been thoroughly instructed in first-aid work. This knowledge enabled him to save the life of Haugel, the 17-months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cristo, of Jackson. The baby had fallen into a stream and was not recovered for fully five minutes. Effectual efforts were being made to revive it when Dean arrived. Assisted by Joseph Allen, line installer he had the child breathing when a physician arrived 30 minutes later. Jackson officials and the press credited Dean with saving the baby's life, while Allen received commendation for his share in the work.

Service in Spite of Danger
In zero weather and working in danger from falling poles and high voltage wires, L. R. Stimpson, O. A. Judd and Claude Pickett fought flames atop telephone poles and saved the telephone plant, while preventing injury from falling equipment to people in the street below, during a disastrous fire in Potosky. Similar work during a fire in Pontiac earned recognition for V. A. McLaughlin. Don Young and Miss Schram, Miss Schram gave the alarm and summoned the others to fight the fire, their efforts preventing the interruption of intercity toll service.

Charles McEachern found a crowd helplessly viewing an automobile that had been crushed under the wheels of a train at a grade crossing in Bay City. No effort had been made to save it. F. Woolworth who was pinned under the wreckage. McEachern had the mass of steel and wood removed from the victim, without further injuring him, and gave first aid until a physician arrived. Similar work brought commendation to E. E. Hayes and A. E. Lewis, who rescued three adults and three children who were trapped under a wrecked and burning automobile near Mason, Michigan.

HOW TO RECALL THE OPERATOR

If, after putting in a telephone call, it is necessary to recall the operator, she should be signalled by moving the receiver hook up and down the entire length of the slot—slowly. A great many people, when anxious to get a quick response, jiggle the hook, not realizing that when they do so, the signal barely flickers, or does not show at all. When the hook is moved up and down slowly, the signal lamp will glow and go out at regular intervals, thus attracting the operator's attention, but unless the signal lamps are given a chance to function properly there can be no response.
