

TRAVEL MONEY

The most convenient funds to use whenever you travel are travelers' checks.

We issue these in $10, $20, $50, and $100 denominations, bound in a little book containing just the right assortment.

Furthermore, travelers' checks are safer than money because they are valueless until countersigned.

Then they are accepted by banks, stores, hotels, railways, and steamship lines at face value.

ARE YOUR LAMPS CLEAN?

It is not unusual for people to forget that lamps need cleaning quite as much as other articles in the room—they also collect dust. A neglected lamp may give only from a half to three-quarters of its rated candlepower.

There is a three-fold loss: loss of light absorbed by the dust; loss of eye-comfort from strained vision; loss of money paid for light not utilized.

Lamps ought to be dusted every day; they should be wiped with a damp cloth every week; they should be washed with soap and water every month.

The Things I Love

There are the things that I love best
These are the dreams I'll hold
Against my faintly thrilling heart
When I am old
The color of the sky at night
When it still throbs with sunset light
The dawn's first gold
The shading of the trees that turn
So quickly, and the first that burn
On my hearthstone—
These are the things that I love best
That I will hold against my breast
When youth has left me, and I face
The end, alone.

The purple pastels that I paint
What early summer waits
The green of leafy, dew-kissed woods
When morn first breaks;
The iridescence of the sea
That creeps so far away from me;
The blue of lakes.

A dress I loved, of silent gray;
A silent ash of yesterday;
A prism that once hung beside
A window when the daytime died;
The wonder of a baby's eyes
That seemed to speak of paradise,
And love's first kiss—
These are the things that I love best,
That I will hold against my breast
When I am old, "Life itself
Was less than this."
—Margaret E. Sangster, in Saturday Evening Post.

Much-Married Women in the British Isles

The house of lords was astonished the other day by an almost incredible story of a wedding ceremony told by Lord Daryington—formerly Mr. Pike Poole (M. P., assistant postmaster general from 1915 to 1922)—in the course of a speech on the matrimonial causes bill. "The other day," he declared, "I heard of a case where a woman was married and no fewer than seven of her previous husbands attended the ceremony. That is a natural consequence of laxity of idios as to the marriage bond."

Later, Lord Daryington told me that he had heard of another case—just as remarkable—concerning a marriage at which there were four bridesmaids, all of whom had been wives of the bridegroom at one time or another!—Lord Don Tit-Bits.

Ancient Evergreen

The first hundred years may be the worst a human being has to endure, but there is an ancient evergreen tree on the Rocky mountain side in Glacier National park, Montana, which experts say shows evidence of having battled for its existence with the elements for three centuries.

Huge snow drifts heaped from the mountain tops each winter crush it to the earth, and there it lies, growing above the ground. The trunk is 15 inches in diameter. Each spring it tries to rise, but it can't ever grow up like other trees because every winter there is a 300-foot drift in this particular spot in Glacier canyon, where Nature gave it root. The Glacier park foresters regard this tree as one of the queerest freaks of nature they ever saw.
