IT MUST PAY.

The man who says that advertising in The Enterprise doesn't pay is setting his judgment up against the business brains of some of the most successful men in America.

If you will watch the columns of The Enterprise for a few months, you will find advertisements of such nationally known institutions as the Ford Motor Company, The Standard Oil Company, The Firestone Company, The Goodyear Company, the Lorillard Company, The William Wrigley, Jr., Company, and many others.

These firms employ highly paid specialists who know that they will get a profit out of every dollar they invest in advertising space. They check returns carefully, they watch results over a period of months or years, and then they buy advertising space where they get the best results.

For they have no interest in helping the editor or in seeing Farmington have a bigger and larger paper. Before they place advertising in The Enterprise one question is raised: "Will it pay?" The answer must be "Yes" for they keep right on advertising year after year.

So it seems that to be consistent the man who says "It doesn't pay to advertise in The Enterprise" must add that these nationally famous business men got where they are by wasting money.
