Education Pays in Leadership, Influence and Honors

An investigation published by the United States Bureau of Education shows that of all the people in the United States who have performed distinguished service and received high honors that there was:

- One person out of each 150,000 who had no schooling.
- One person out of each 37,500 with a common school education.
- One person out of each 1,724 with a high school education.
- One person out of each 187 with a college education.

The above lines show the comparative chances of no schooling and with the different grades of education. Parents who give their children a common school education give them four times the chance to become a leader and receive distinction that the child with no schooling has. Those who give their children a high school education give them 87 times the chance, and the parents who sacrifice and give their children a college education give them more than 800 times the chance of the child without schooling.—E. J. Bodman in Banker-Farmer.

Rose From Sick Bed to Ride 80 Miles to Vote

Past Rev. Rev. of 14 miles on horseback to rouse the nation against the British, and General Sheridan's ride of twenty miles, also on horseback, to rally his own army, are famous in history. But Caesar Rodney, leader of the Delaware delegation in the Continental congress, although not so well known to history as Bessie and Sheridan, arose from a sick bed and rode 80 miles on horseback through a storm in July, 1776, that he might vote in the affirmative on the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, news having reached him that there was a split in the delegation.

Rodney arose from a bed of pain and dashed 80 miles to Philadelphia, in time to vote and save his state the humiliation of disapproving the Declaration. He reached his chair in congress as the roll was being called. Voting "Yes," he then sank fainting in his seat.

Besides being high sheriff of Kent county and judge of all the lower courts of the province of Delaware, Rodney came into prominence as a statesman. He was a delegate to the stamp act congress held in New York in 1765, and as speaker of that body was largely instrumental in bringing about the first Continental congress.

In 1775, after the second session of the congress at Philadelphia, he journeyed through his native province sowing the seed of independence, and was appointed a brigadier-general in the army under Washington at the beginning of the revolution. As commander of the Delaware militia he rendered valuable service, for which he was made a major-general in 1777. In this year also he was made president of the state of Delaware, from which office he retired in 1782.—Detroit News.

Only Few Antelopes Left in United States

Fifty years ago pronghorn antelopes, the swiftest animal in America, were so abundant there, was little thought of trying to estimate their herds. When antelope were numerous and widely scattered, the animal as a species was safe.

It ranged over a large part of the western country from the Missouri to the Cascade range and the Sierra Nevada, and from Canada to Mexico. It now is reaching the point of final disappearance.

There are a few hundred antelope living around the northern border of Yellowstone National park, some in Wyoming and New Mexico. "In the state of Idaho there are about 200 in the very southwestern corner along the headwaters of the Snake. A conservative estimate of the total number left in California is about 300. In southern Oregon and northern Nevada there are perhaps more than 100 in the part of the United States.

The antelope cannot stand captivity. It does not thrive even in wide-fenced enclosures as do the buffalo, deer and elk. It is delicate, high-strung and easily upset.

Closed seasons and such protection from gunners as are offered through state game laws are of no avail. The few remaining antelope live on the waste stretches of property that belong to the government.—Nature Magazine.

MICHIGAN DAIRYMEN TO WIN DIPLOMAS

Three hundred and eighty-four Michigan dairymen, owners of herds in state cow testing associations which have passed the 300 pound mark in butterfat production for a year, have earned recognition by the national dairy exposition, and will be granted special diplomas if they register at the exposition at Milwaukee the last of September.

Of the 1425 dairy herds in cow test association work in the state during the year from July 1, 1923, to July 1, 1924, nearly a third, or the 384 which have earned the diplomas, reached the coveted goal of 300 pound production. This percentage is said by dairy officials to be an unusually high one, reflecting credit on the dairy industry of Michigan.

Many of the farmers who own "300 pound" herds are planning to attend the dairy exposition in Milwaukee from Sept. 27 to Oct. 4, according to A. C. Baltzer, extension specialist in dairying at M. A. C., who is arranging details of the trip.

A PURELY AGRICULTURAL FAIR

Reshingle Once—
For Your LifetimeYou can do that if you will use
"CREO-DIPT"
STAINED SHINGLES

Quality of shingles. Each shingle is sawed from selected cedar logs—not from forest waste; all parallel widths—no wedge shapes; thoroughly seasoned—not baked to death in dry kilns. Better shingles are not to be found in any market.

Quality of stain. Each shingle is thoroughly stained by a special factory process. Pure pigments are ground twice in pure linseed oil and carried deep in the fibre of the wood with creosote oil. The result is preservation—good as well as soft-toned colors that do not fade or wash out in streaks.

They cost less than staining on the job.
