THE ROSE PETAL ON THE CUP... According to ancient custom, it was a mark of unusual hospitality for a hostess to fill a cup of broth to the brim, and then as an added gesture, place a rose petal on the brimming surface. The rose petal was definitely a token of good will. It made the beverage no richer in taste; it signified no greater quantity. It was merely an indication that the person who furnished it wanted to do everything possible to make her offering as pleasing as possible to the one who received it.
