who built it were paid by the mile and consequently they put in many miles as possible by following the rivers and going around small mountains.

Hundreds of trains and thousands of passengers, and many carloads of freight have had to go around these curves every day for fifty years, causing an enormous and ever increasing loss for several years the railroad company has been cutting out these curves and straightening the line, at an expense of millions of dollars.

What I want to say with this is: We should be careful of the lines upon which our lives are laid out. The line of life is at first flexible and movable, and it can be run anywhere, but once it is imbedded and ballasted in the soil, and rock of habit it becomes a fixture, and may become a finality. Therefore, Mark the Perfect Man.

But where is the standard? Heroes like Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon.

Art—Michael Angelo, Raphael, Albrecht Dürer.

Poetry—Shakespeare, Goethe, Schiller, Longfellow.

Were they perfect? The world calls them Geni and indeed their works show it, but never the less they have kindled their lights on other men's lights, they have continued what was already begun.

We have men of brains, men of knowledge, more than at any other time in history, but we lack men that are perfect—or men of integrity.

The daily papers prove to us, that graft, dishonesty, etc., is practiced by thousands of our people, they prove that we need real men.

W. T. Moore, who is touching this, concludes that the greatest need of mankind today is citizenship who find their highest joy in noble deeds. He says:

Our next great need is MEN—Not little men, who have but little brains.

Not those that mainly live for sordid gains;

But MEN of LARGENESS in the church and state,

Men worthy to be called both good and great.

Men with clear heads, clean hearts and stainless hands,

Whose sympathy with soul includes all lands,

Who live not in cold lifeless, human creeds

But find their highest joy in noble deeds.

And he goes on saying: There is but one standard, but one ideal man, but one perfect—Our Master and Lord Jesus Christ.

He alone could say: I am the truth, the life. In and through His is a harmonious development of the whole man, body and soul, attainable; and following his footsteps we can not go wrong.

Sometimes it seems difficult for us to follow him, obstructions of all sorts are put in our ways, hours of depression will come, even times in which we think every thing is lost.

This has happened to all great men, but by not giving up, they have not only fought the battle, but conquered the enemy.

We are told of Raphael who painted the Transfiguration of Christ, he became disgusted thinking that he was not able to do justice to the Lord.

After laying aside the brush for some time, he came to the conclusion that he must finish what he had begun, and finished the masterpiece. Where there is a will there is a way.

Men of integrity is the cry our age calls for. It is the cry from the pulpit, from the press, we need men and women who walk upright—in the presence of God.

Let us just for a moment look at the progress the world has made in the last fifty years. What has been accomplished. This is not any more the age of the oxen team or the canvas-backed prairie schooner, when news went by four-horse stage coaches or sailing vessels.

This is the age of the palace car and lightning express, the age of the telephone and cable, the age of the automobile and X-rays and radio.

Forward is the motto, in social, technical and scientific grounds.

It is the time of research and investigation—when every good thing seems to be possible, but also the time when the light of investigation is thrown on many facts which show plainly that morality and the fear of the Lord needs to be brought to the light.

What we need, is not so much about honesty as to practice it in daily life.

To walk upright—to be a Christian means to carry the credentials with him, like the ship, its flag and papers.

The fruits of the spirit are to hang in ripening clusters on the boughs of conduct and conversation.

Mark the perfect man—peace. The earth is crying for peace, Peace between the nations, in the homes and in the soul of man.

We hear much about World Court and Peace Conferences. More than ever before every normal man and woman has come to the conclusion that wars, especially like the last, which cost 20,000,000 lives, must be abolished.

The courts are well and good, but I am convinced that after all the only remedy to stop war is the rearing of a generation that follow the principles of our Lord Jesus—a generation that marks the perfect man and walks upright.

There is no peace possible until Christ is King, until the gospel is not only preached but practiced by one and all.

Here the Psalmist has in view the individual peace. It's the peace that presents itself in home and heart. It is the clear conscience which tells me after the day's work is done that I have accomplished something that is God-like. It's the peace that awaits us when our earth journey is finished; when the Master shall say:

Thou faithful servant has been faithful over a few things, I shall set thee ruler over many things.

Therefore, Mark the perfect man, walk upright for the end of this man shall be peace.

New Farm Motor On a Hand Truck

Looking forward to the time when electric farms will be more or less general in this country, the General Electric Company has developed a farm hand truck in four different horsepower sizes. Wherever electric service is already available on farms, either through power company's lines or independent farm power plants.

New Farm Motor

This motor can serve as a hired man of tireless energy, unlimited capacity for work and utmost reliability.

The motor outfit consists of the motor itself, with its control equipment, and a countershaft which carries four driven pulleys of different sizes. The complete set-up is mounted on a four-wheel truck. The countershaft and pulleys provide four possible speeds for every driven machine, according to requirements.

This motor operates at 110 or 220 volts, single phase or three phase. It is manufactured in 1 1/2, 3, 5 and 7 1/2 horsepower sizes. A control cable of sufficient length to reach the driven machine is provided, and a start-and-stop push button is located at the end of this cable. A belt-tightener is mounted on the motor.

Europe Well Along in Farm Electrification

Experimental work in farm electrification has been going on in Europe for a somewhat longer period than in this country. The four European countries which, from available reports, appear to have done the most in this work are Sweden, Germany, France and Italy; in about the order named. Government financial assistance has been given to some extent.

In Sweden about one-third of the farms are electrified thus far, owing to the abundant hydro-electric resources, and even threshing and plowing are done electrically. Electric plowing has been the subject of experiments in France and Germany since as long ago as 1903.

Power Must Help Seller and Buyer

In a careful study of the economic side of electrifying the farms of America, J. C. Martin, western editor of the Electrical World, finds two general facts which must be recognized. The first of these is that the seller must make a profit, if he is to continue in business. The other is that the buyer must make a profit from the use of the things he buys.

In the case of farm electrification the seller would be the power company, if power is to be obtained in that manner, and the buyer, of course, would be the farmer. The product, electric power, must bring a profit to the seller, the electric power company, and must give the buyer, (the farmer) a profit from his use.

"In the case of the buyer," says Mr. Martin, who coincides with what General Electric specialists also contend, "the profit does not always come in the form of a money balance. It may come in the form of better living conditions or better health, or in numerous other ways. However, if he is using the things he buys in a producing business from which he derives an income, then he must be able to turn these things into more cash than he pays for them, including the labor and process costs through which he must put his raw materials."

Confidence Won for Him

A young man once applied for a position of considerable responsibility. The employer told him that he was too young and half jokingly suggested that he call again five years later. "Five years from now," said the young fellow, "if I don't want this job, I shall have a much better one." The words and the quiet confidence with which they were spoken so impressed the employer that a few days later he sent for the young man and gave him the place, in which he "made good"—Youth's Companion.

To extract a letter from a white-mouthed bottle and quickly fill it with hot water, then hold the closed part only the nozzle and twist and press down quite tight. The solution will act as a paste and draw the flesh down and the solution will come out quite painlessly.
