REMINISCENCES
mened in the fall we boys began to use this hole for a jail. It had caved in some and was 6 to 8 feet across. Owing to its depth a boy once in there could not get out unless he had assistance and quite often a lad spent his recess or his noon hour there, or until such a time as his captors saw fit to pull him out. One day Frank Clark, one of the boys, was thrust into the place and left there while the boys answered the bell and took their places in the school room. It was at the morning recess hour. His absence was noticed by the teacher and he made inquiry about it. One of the small boys after some questioning told him where he was. Our principal knew the situation and sent one of the boys to assist Frank in getting out. Instead of doing this he jumped in with him. Not returning, another boy was sent and he was pulled in by the other two. I think I was the third or fourth one to be sent out only to join the others in the jail. One or two more came and they met the same fate. Soon our principal discovered that he was likely to lose all of his boys unless he changed his course, which he did and came himself. After mildly rebuking us he told one of the boys to hold up his hands and he would help him out. This the boy did with the expected action of getting a firm grasp on the teacher and pulling him in with the rest of us. This was a bold act and we were a little anxious about the result. One of the boys was finally lifted out and he getting a ladder, the rest of us with the principal ascended to the top of the ground. We expected punishment but were let off with a mild talk after the school. Soon after the old well was filled up.
One of the most capable and best liked teachers was Carlton A. Beardsley. His government is best described in the French proverb, "The Hand of Steel in the Velvet Glove." He knew how to interest his pupils and get them to do their best. He too married one of his pupils, Miss Sarah Hance. We were surprised by his scholarship and the extent of his general knowledge and information. I remember some laughable things that occurred. One day one of the boys in the English literature class telling of Alfred Tennyson and his work said that he wrote in "Memorandum" this was his nickname after that. This was equalled by one of the girls in the philosophy class who said that Franklin produced electricity by rubbing a cat backwards. Another said that a vacuum is the place where the Pope lives. One of the coeds, whose knowledge of mechanics was almost nil, hearing something said about a locomotive boiler remarked that she did not know that they boiled the locomotives, whereon one of the boys informed her that it was done to make the locomotive tender. One day in the geometry class one of the boys had drawn a figure upon the black board and he was asked by Mr. Beardsley to tell how he produced it. It was a technical description in which geometry terms were to be used. This pupils' drawings in this particular study were usually perfect. But not always so his language. He failed in this instance, after a number of efforts. Once more the question was asked: "How did you draw it?" Somewhat tired and irritated he answered Mr. Beardsley, "With a piece of chalk and a string." This answer was not a proper one and he knew it. Right then and there he received a brief but rather pointed lecture which he did not forget. Years after when the boy, Fred M. Warner, had been honored by election to the highest office in the gift of the commonwealth, he and his professor had a hearty laugh over the incident.
Space does not permit me to mention the names of teachers, some of whom are still living and who did their work well. Some of those who were my companions in the old school house and are still among the living are Mrs. Truscott, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ely, Mrs. James Hogle, T. H. McGee, Mrs. Jessie Green, Mrs. Avery of Pontiac, Carl Hutton, J. J. Webster and others.
As I near the sunset I realize that life is but a single stage of an never ending journey, the success of which depends in a large measure upon correct training of the mind. If teachers have the proper enthusiasm for the work combined with culture and the power of exposition that enables them to command the attention of their pupils at all times, then their work will be of the kind that will teach their pupils how to live, and that is the thing for in the words of Victor Hugo: "It is nothing to die but it is frightful not to have lived."

CARD OF THANKS
Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Jones wish to thank their friends and neighbors for their many kindly acts, and for flowers during the recent illness of Mrs. Jones.

COMMUNITY STREET DANCE
In Royal Oak every Thursday. Free to public. Managed by the Merchants Association of the Chamber of Commerce. Remember the Million Dollar Exposition, dates August 31 to September 5.

Fair Voter—I wouldn't care to occupy the President's chair—it's too heavy a seat for me.
He—Yes; it's scarcely possible to sit in it without being annoyed by the tax.

Clashes of Authority
The Cat looks at a Queen.
The Queen attempts to catch 'er.
The Cat, with nerve serene,
Reserves the right to scratch 'er.

Vicious Benevolence
Little James (who has an inquiring mind)—Father, what do they mean when they call a man public-spirited?
Professor Bradley—Why, it usually means that he is very liberal in endeavoring to persuade other people to spend their money bountifully for the public good.—Stray Stories.

Too Good to Change
Alice—Dick is so nice to me, Virginia—Why don't you marry him?
Alice—Oh, but I want him to keep on being nice.

Full Directions
Missess—Do you call this sponge cake, Nora? Why, it's as hard as can be.
New Cook—Yes, ma'am; that's the way a sponge is before it's wet. Soak it in your tea.

Two Looks
"Did you notice that insolent conductor looking at you as if you hadn't paid your fare?"
"Yes, and did you notice me looking at him as if I had?"—Paris Le Rire.

The Loving Husband
Wife—Oh, John, mother's fallen downstairs and broken.
John (hopefully)—Her neck?
Wife—No, dear, one of the banisters.—Vienna Nasenblute.

DAY OF REST
"Why does he sit so far back in the shadows to church on Sunday?"
"To rest his eyes from sitting so far front in the stage lights in the theater all week."

That Woman
He gently opened the locket.
And scanned the pretty face;
"It suits my mind," said he, "to find This woman in the case."

Early Bird and Owl
"We had a fine sunrise this morning," said one Detroitter to another.
"Did you see it?"
"Sunrise?" said the second man.
"Why, I'm always in bed before sunrise."

Somewhat Different
Mrs. Swift—She doesn't believe in hiding her light under a bushel.
Mrs. Switzer—Indeed not. But she manages to keep her old flames under cover!—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Knighthood in Distress
Squire—Did you send for me, my lord?
Launcelot—Yes, make haste. Bring the can opener. I've a flea in my knight clothes!—Good Hardware.

Orientation
"Is your mind an optimist?"
"Well," replied the tired-looking woman, "he's an optimist in hoping for the best, but a good deal of a pessimist in working it out."

Pretty Good Himself
"Why this rube maketh, Uncle?"
"You've got city clothes."
"Slick grafters can make a man look like a rube when he's in."

YOU HAVE OFTEN SEEN OLD HOMES LIKE THIS ONE
These tall, bare, unainly houses date back to the early pioneer days—back to the days when our fathers lived in the big outdoors and had a home as a place to eat and sleep.
Today conditions have changed, architecture is different, and people desire more beautiful, comfortable and convenient homes because they spend more time indoors.
It is uprising what a change is made in these sturdily built old homes by a little remodeling. A room added here, a window or two there, a breakfast nook, a large front porch, etc.
Let's all join hands and dress up our city by remodeling all the old homes this year. Come in and see our book "Old Homes Made New." It will give you many ideas for improving your home.

CUT THIS OUT
This portion shows the improvements made in the old home shown above. Cut out in outline and lay it on the large picture, moving it about until in position, and observe the effort.
