HOT WEATHER HAPPINESS

Next to electric cooking devices—and these are a joy to the housekeeper's heart—there is nothing so likely to keep the crispness and coolness in one's white cuffs and the sweetness in one's disposition as an electric fan in the kitchen.

A kitchen fan is easily and cheaply put in place. It costs very little to run. It keeps the air of the kitchen cool and sweet. You can cook anything—cabbage, cauliflower, ham, onions or whatnot—and nobody beyond the kitchen need know it.

An electric fan in any room—dining room, living room—is wonderfully refreshing in the hot weather. The expense is small.
