INDEPENDENCE OF THE FINANCIAL KIND

By WILLIAM E. KNOX

President, American Bankers Association.

The principle upon which America was founded was independence. The primary duty of the pioneers of this country was to interpret independence in its political sense, but independence today has another special significance in its financial sense. The ability to apply the primary principles of personal economics, to use intelligently that common thing we call "a pay check," has as much to do with individual independence as any other force in life.

William E. Knox

The greatest problem of independence of the average man or woman is how to get out of what they earn a good living and a reasonable degree of financial comforts in old age. We cannot maintain a high standard of national life without an intelligent management of the financial matters that constantly confront the average individual and family. In the accumulation of capital in the hands of the masses lies the hope of the true independence of a nation's people. The chief concern of wage earners is to get a reasonable degree of financial independence out of what they actually earn.

This question of how to attain personal financial independence has not been worked out on the principle of individual responsibility. The most important social needs today are a course of instruction in public education to give young people a practical notion of how to start life on a sound economic basis; and, secondly, a broad co-operative plan in American industry whereby men and women shall be helped to work out a personal financial program that will guide them toward a definite goal of financial independence. There ought to be a way for a man, for every dollar put aside each week now, to get back four or five dollars a week forty or fifty years later, regardless of where he works.

The present policy in American industry of hiring employees is based on the assumption that they will automatically become dependent. Old age pensions and other forms of charitable compensation are to be commended in lieu of a practical alternative, but in principle they are wrong and contrary to the purposes of democracy. What we want is an organized plan that will direct working people toward independence. No system can claim complete success that does not contemplate the financial independence of every employee, according to his ability to earn. It can be shown that American employees, with reasonable prudence on their own part, can reach a fair degree of independence while they are still working.

There must be injected into our industrial policy an additional economic element of mutual benefit and permanent value to both labor and capital. We are concerned not alone with the amount of wages and profits that are extracted, but with how these earnings shall be used. I am arguing for an industrial economic policy based upon the principle of independence. I am arguing for a new basis of cooperation in industry, for the elimination of poverty, and for a practical management of economic democracy.

When public education teaches school students how to manage their personal affairs intelligently, and when the heads of firms make it a requirement that every young man and young woman who accepts a position shall be working toward a definite goal in saving money, then we will attack economic illiteracy at the source and begin to save men from the tragedy of financial dependence.

NORTHVILLE TO HONOR HARRY S. GERMAN

ing to Detroit papers, he easily disposed of the Monroe Stars at Northville by the tune of 15 to 5. He has two sons on his Northville club and both are graduate pitchers of Northville High and capable ball players with their Dad on the home team.

The coming reunion at Northville will be conducted by the business men of the city. Band concerts, horse racing, speeches and two ball games will take up the afternoon.

Mayor Johnnie Smith of Detroit, Clinton McGee of Pontiac, Oliver Golden and Thornton Dixon of Monroe will be among the speakers.

Milan and Milford will cross bats for the first game of ball and Northville will play the winner with Harry German in the box for the home club. The big program will start promptly at 1:30 o'clock.

We have several base ball enthusiasts in this community and undoubtedly they will join the proverbial 10,000 fans, Northville.
