That there is no room in a state for two autocrats is conclusively proven by the row now on between Governor Groesbeck and Manager Dickson of the Michigan State Fair Association. There has been a feeling for some time that Mr. Dickinson was running the fair in a rather high handed manner. It may prove a good thing for Michigan and the fair that the state just at present has a man in the seat of authority who doesn't take kindly to any show of dictatorial powers by those occupying desks on the side line.

WHAT KIND OF SOCIETY LEADER? A recent dispatch tells of the sudden death of a wealthy Philadelphia society leader at Los Angeles. An autopsy disclosed the fact that she died of alcoholism. A fine leader for the young buds of Philadelphia.

OUTSIDERS NOT WANTED "Outside" rumormongers came to grief here," says the Mt. Clemens Monitor. Inferentially, we gather "insiders" are enjoying the usual immunity from molestation by the authorities.

THE HOUSEWIFE AND THE PEDDLER The housewife usually regards the peddler who comes to her door as a nuisance. But half the time she encourages him by the upside-down process of "buying something to get rid of him." She finds it easier, in the individual instance, to buy a package of bad needles, or a rug, or a rubber apron which turns out to be a second, than it is to listen to a stream of talk and force herself to argument as to why she should not buy.

Yet if all the housewives of a given town were to unite in refusal to buy of itinerant salesmen for a year, they would find themselves left, before the year was out, in peace and quiet to attend to their home duties without interruption and to do their marketing according to their own good judgment.

THE FOOL'S FIRE Forest fires, according to an estimate made by Collier's, cost this country last year the enormous sum of $38,000,000, or an average of nearly $100,000 every twenty-four hours. Over 92,000 forest fires were reported, the most of which were caused by carelessness. Northern Michigan has just passed through some of the worst forest fires in years and through this destruction the work of the conservation department will be offset for years to come. There is still danger of these fires breaking out anew. It is coming the season of dry weather when the leaves will be falling to the ground making the possibilities of fire greater than ever. Now is a good time to exercise great caution in preventing a repetition of the disaster of a few weeks ago.

MISS NORA BAYES RETURNS TO TEMPLE Miss Nora Bayes, the international singer of songs who captivated London with her clever singing, returns triumphant to the Keith-Albee Circuit and will headline the bill at B. F. Keith's Temple Theatre starting Sunday afternoon. Miss Bayes (Our Own Nora), has a collection of many new songs, besides some of the old favorites and will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Louis Alter. He was a stock actor on the Pacific Coast for several seasons. Galla-Rini, the versatile musician and his sisters in moments musical; Mel Klee, a blackface monologist who calls himself "The Price of Walls"; Frank Jerome and Evelyn present "A Breeze from Broadway." Al Allen Gladys Taylor and Jeanne Houston in songs and dances; Ben Dover, sensational contortionist; A Hal Roach comedy, "There Goes the Bride" and the usual screen subjects.

OPPORTUNITY GIVEN HIGHER EDUCATION Mr. Chris. Tizez, a prominent Lutheran layman of Farmington, was the principal speaker at a meeting held October 18, at the Lutheran Church of Farmington, the Rev. P. Graupner, pastor, in the interest of the Valparaiso University Appeal.

Valparaiso University was taken over by members of the Lutheran church several weeks ago. The intention is to develop it into a school for high learning. Valparaiso University was founded in 1874 by Dr. H. M. Brown and has in its fifty-one years of its existence rendered an unusual and reputable service, especially to the boy and girl who were not able to receive a higher training at other schools. There is an element of dynamism in the history of Valparaiso University. The founder believed that our American system of higher education did not give the poor man and those who live a hard life were deprived of an adequate elementary education, an opportunity for university training. He, therefore, sought to establish and maintain a school at Valparaiso, Ind., which would give all these an opportunity who were denied it elsewhere.

The fact that he drew no less than one hundred thousand students to the school, opening with only some thirty students fifty-one years ago, and the further fact that among the alumni of the school are numbered such men as Gov. Blaine of Wisconsin, Senator in Deen of Illinois, Senator Small of Illinois, Senator Norris of Nebraska, Senator Ralston of Indiana, and Senator Jones, are ample proof that he succeeded.

With the death of Mr. Evans and the passing of his genius for organizing and financing an institution of the kind that he did, Valparaiso University began to decline.

A further remarkable element is seen in the acquisition of the university by the Lutherans. For the new owners will make of this school a distinctive school of higher learning. Valparaiso will be the first Lutheran university in America. And through it the distinctive genius of the Lutheran faith will find expression. It is the plan of the Lutheran Board of Christian Education in America to secure at once a fairly large endowment fund and to build up the college of liberal arts and the professional school. The plan is for the present not to make it a research, but a teaching university of high educational standards.

Old Festival Rites in Honor of Ceres

The sacred rites with which the annual festival of Ceres was celebrated at Eleusis were called the Eleusinian mysteries. Many traditions were about in ancient times, say Chambers, as to the origin of this festival. Of these, the most generally accepted was to the effect that Ceres, wandering about the earth in search of Proserpine, her lost daughter, arrived at Eleusis, where she rested on the famous "Sorrowful Stone" beside the well of Calchours. In return for some small act of kindness and in order to commemorate her visit she taught Timoteus the use of corn and other cereals on the plain of Bhattan, near the city, and instituted the mystic rites peculiarly known as belonging to this goddess of agriculture.

The festival which she inaugurated consisted of two parts—the greater and the lesser mysteries, the less important feast serving as but an introduction or prelude to the greater. The celebration began on the thirteenth day of Broedromion, but history finds no exact record of the proceedings. That they were most important in the mystic life of the time is evident from the prominence given to them—R. H. Tingley, in Chicago Journal.

Many and Various Are "Graveyards" of Books When a book languishes, unread, unlooked at and unasked for in the shelves of a library, one phase of its life has passed and it is destined soon to enter on a new one. But what is the next stage in its career? That, to the man in the street, is one of the mysteries of literature. Most libraries have a sort of sanctuary for unwanted books—a chamber of the forgotten—where they are kept for a time and then disposed of. Sometimes they find their way to second-hand book stores; sometimes they are repurposed to supply paper for other books with all the world before them. Lackeet of all are those which the London library decides to discard. It was recently revealed that they are sent out to the Seychelles Islands, where one book is as good as another, and the date of a volume's publication has no influence on its chances of popularity. Adventurous books, these, that go voyaging out to the Indian Ocean. But sooner or later the ants will get them, and when these voracious devourers of literature are done with them there will be nothing left for ordinary readers.—London Mail.

This Week's Story This week's short story, "He glanced anxiously around him, then, assuring himself that he was unobserved, brought out a small paper package. For a moment his hand trembled over the glass of water. Should he put the powder in? He was breathing heavily. He cast a glance about him—and then tipped the powder into the water. One gulp and it was gone! "If that thought doesn't make me sleep tonight I'll have to see a specialist!" he muttered.
