

Wreaths on Statues*Barred in London

One of the little-known forbidden things in London is to lay a wreath before a statue. Five Americans of Scottish descent brought a wreath of bay leaves to lay before the statue of Robert Burns in the Embankment gardens, the occasion being the 125th anniversary of his death and they being Americans who keep note of such things.

A park ranger caught them at it and soon stopped this rash attempt to add to the decoration of the Embankment gardens. He ascertained at once (as he suspected) that they had no official and properly sealed permission to lay a wreath on Robert Burns' memorial.

The Americans asked him what he would have done if they had laid their wreath before Burns without being seen. The ranger replied honestly enough that in that case he would have taken it off when he did see it. So the Americans took their wreath away sorrowfully and laid it before the bust of Lincoln at the Savoy hotel. But why should it be necessary to get permission to do so innocent and pleasing a thing as to lay a wreath before a statue?

Danger to the Eyes*in Major Industries

That there is hardly an industrial occupation in America which does not add each year to the steadily increasing number of the blind and near blind is the announcement made by the national committee for the prevention of blindness, following an extensive study of eye hazards in industry. Referring to the records of a single insurance company which in three and a half years settled claims involving 1,040 cases of permanent disability resulting from eye injuries, the committee found that 22 eyes were lost in the presumably safe occupations of merchandising, farming and textile manufacture.

"This is further proof," the committee reports, "that serious eye accidents are likely to occur wherever men, women and children are employed. There is no such thing as a really nonhazardous occupation."

The report shows that the greatest number of serious eye injuries for the entire country occur in the metal manufacturing industries. But in Pennsylvania the coal mining industry ranks first as a cause of industrial blindness, and in Wisconsin hand tools are the greatest single cause of injuries to eyesight. One large ship-building company had more than 4,300 eye cases treated in its dispensary in one year. The committee recommends the keeping of detailed and accurate records of the nature, causes and costs of eye injuries as the first step in any campaign for the prevention of eye accidents in an industrial plant or in an entire industry.

Nothing but Justice

In this God's world, with its wild whirling eddies and mad-doom oceans, where men and nations perish as if without law and judgment for an unjust thing sternly delayed, dost thou think therefore that there is no justice? It is what the fool had said to his heart. It is what the wise in all times were wise because they desired and knew forever not to be. I tell thee again there is nothing else but justice; one strong thing I find here below—the just thing, the true thing. . . . If the thing is unjust, thou hast not succeeded, though bonfires blazed from north to south, and bells rang, and editors wrote leading articles, and the just thing lay trampled out of sight to all mortal eyes—an abolished and annihilated thing.—Thomas Carlyle.

Coupon Luck

It is estimated that 97 per cent of the wonderful investments are those that didn't look very good at the time.—Duluth Herald.

Cats on Hire!

Letting out cats on hire to destroy vermin in offices and warehouses is becoming a thriving industry in London.

Sea "Flowers"

Although sea anemones are called "flowers of the sea," through their resemblance to flowers, they are actually animals, possessing both a mouth and a stomach. They are found on rocks, but do not grow out of them, being merely attached to the rocks by suction.

Opinion and Affection

Opinion is something wherein I go about to give reason why all the world should think as I think. Affection is a thing wherein I look after the pleasing of myself.—John Salden.

BUILDER'S PARK

"A SUBDIVISION WORTHY OF ITS NAME"

BUILDER'S PARK is a subdivision strictly in accord with the development that Farmington has naturally taken upon itself. Farmington is and will always be a purely residential community of the highest type. BUILDER'S PARK lying on the south boundary of the Village of Farmington on Division Street and Fendt Road is all that the name implies, a builder's park. It is the absence rather than the presence of factories that makes Farmington real estate so desirable. In a few years from now Farmington and the nearby districts will be known throughout this section of the country as one of the highest class residential communities near Detroit; its exclusiveness will make real estate values soar to heights that even people who have lived there all of their lives will wonder at. In ten years from now when you tell your friends (as you will) that you bought a lot in Builder's Park in 1925 for $695.00, they will hesitate to believe you.

With all of its improvements, its high restrictions and its desirable location, BUILDER'S PARK is even today priced far below the average.

Since our announcement last week the sales have already begun to come in, so while there are a large number of lots to choose from, and your chance of getting the lot you want is good, come into our office and pick out your lot. You cannot afford to pass by this opportunity. Remember that story about the early bird?

Drop us a card, call at our office, or call us on the phone, we will be pleased to show you the property, and some day you will thank us for selling you the lot.
