M. S. C. RADIO SCHOOL STARTS IN NOVEMBER

A new radio school, or so-called "school of the air," will be sent out over station WKAR beginning November 2, according to announcement made here last week by extension authorities at the Michigan State College.

Success of a ten-weeks school broadcast from the college station last spring is said to have led to decision to expand the educational radio series. Two separate schools have been announced for this winter. One will run from November 2 until December 18; while the second will start early in January, running until early April.

The fall courses will include a wide variety of subject matter eleven different departments of the state college contributing definite courses of study. These will include: History, English literature, sociology, botany, marketing, entomology, forestry, soils, agricultural engineering, and zoology.

The school will be held from 7:15 until 8:00 o'clock (eastern time) from Monday through Friday, inclusive, each week. Each department is to have definite lecture periods during the schedule.

The college station, WKAR, is operating on its old wave length of 236 metres this year, but is now listed as a 1,600 watt station, making it one of the super-power stations of the country.

After the first of January, a 12-weeks school of special interest to farmers will be broadcast. Detailed programs for this school will depend on requests received from listeners, it is said.
