Masonry Institute honors designers

The Ninth Annual Awards Banquet honoring Michigan architects for excellence of design of projects using masonry materials will be Saturday, Jan. 21, at the Holiday Inn, Livonia-West, Livonia.

Featured speaker for the evening will be Louis G. Redstone of Louis G. Redstone Associates Inc., Livonia, will present his latest writings, "Masonry in Architecture," as published by McGraw-Hill Book Company. The works are an international contemporary statement on structural design and feature masonry as a sculptural material.

Winning designs were selected by a jury of noted architects from Chicago, Ill., from 41 entries submitted by members of the Michigan Society of Architects.

The banquet will begin with a reception at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are priced at $65 per couple. For reservations, contact the Masonry Institute at 478-6455.

WATER ON THE KNEE

Frequently, a person with a fluid filled knee will say that he has "water on the knee". The proper name for the "water" is "synovial fluid" and it does things for the joint that water cannot do.

The viscosity of synovial fluid permits it to lubricate the knee, much like oil in an engine allows free movement of a piston. In addition, synovial fluid absorbs the impact of pressure upon the knee that occurs on running, bending, or when the knee is hit by a blow or a fall. The presence of synovial fluid makes possible dissipation of shear forces that would otherwise fissure the underlying cartilage and bone.

Excess synovial fluid develops as a result of injury or irritation and causes pain by distending the knee joint capsule. The best treatment is to have the excess removed by a physician; the doctor will save a portion of the fluid obtained for analysis. This evaluation helps him identify whether or not the swelling is likely to be short term or is part of a problem that will need further therapy.
