Sailing into the future

Retirement has meant a completely different lifestyle for Joe and me.

At least that's what I thought until our recent visit with George and Betty Masson, (he's a former suburban life reporter) some newly retired friends whose lives are going to be far more changed than ours.

We had lunch with George and Betty aboard their retirement home. It's a 48-foot, two-masted ketch they have poetically named "Inlandree."

Retired since the first of this year, they have been busy — "working our tails off" was the way Betty put it — to get their home shipshape. And we visited them on just about the only day available before they expected to pull out of their rented boat slip and literally sail off into retirement.

THEY'RE HEADING first down the Florida coast and then to the Virgin Islands, where maybe they'll establish a business connection. Or maybe not. They plan within a couple of months to take some friends on a weeklong Caribbean cruise.

They think they may stay in the sunny southern waters for quite awhile, traveling to the various islands as the wind fills their ketch's sails and staying long enough at each to become well acquainted with its uniqueness.

Or then again, since one of their seafaring sons may have time available this year, they may decide to sail to Europe. "About 10 days to Bermuda," said George, "and then another 10 days to the Azores and then it's just a few days to Gibraltar."

Or maybe, they agree ruefully, they just might decide after a few ports to put the boat up for sale. A highly unlikely possibility from where I sit.

GEORGE AND BETTY are not inexperienced as sailors, and they are preparing carefully for their projected travel. This is the third boat they have owned. They have cruised the Caribbean before while living in Puerto Rico, and a couple of years ago they sailed the Inlandree up the east coast, through the Great Lakes and down the Mississippi. George sailed her across the Gulf of Mexico in calm seas and with a burned-out motor.

Girl Scouts say thanks

The Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council is holding its first annual "Project Gift Back." Each Girl Scout troop will commit itself to a gift of "action" to benefit its community.

Michigan Metro Girl Scout President Mary M. Laws will notify mayors by letter of the Girl Scout Gift Back Project in their community. Ideally, each of the 52 communities within Michigan Metro Girl Scout Council will be the recipient of several service projects.

Although Girl Scout troops will make a commitment to a particular service project during the cookie sale, the projects will continue throughout the spring, to a target completion date of June 1. The first troop to report a Project Gift Back for the Farmington area is Troop No. 1215 led by Ingrid Haeuser, who will help clean the grounds at Farmington Community Center.

Girl Scout cookies will be sold through March 11. Cookie booths will be located at supermarkets, banks and stores. The cookies will be available in seven varieties, including the newly introduced Almond Fudge Creme and Pecan Chocolate Chip, made from an improved recipe. Old favorites Thin Mints, Peanut Butter Patties, Peanut Butter Sandwich, Caramel Delites and Shortbread continue to be offered. Cookies are priced at $1.75 per package.

During last year's sale, the people in Wayne and Oakland Counties subsidized Girl Scout program by purchasing almost two million packages of Girl Scout cookies. Project Gift Back is intended as a thank you for this support.
