

Antiquities displayed

"Wealth of the Ancient World: The Nelson Bunker Hunt and William Herbert Hunt Collections" continues at the Detroit Institute of Arts through Sunday, March 25. The exhibition features Greek and Roman antiquities assembled by the Hunt brothers in recent years.

"Wealth of the Ancient World" includes 15 painted vases (two by Euphrates), 38 small-scale bronzes and a selection of 112 rare gold, silver and bronze coins from one of the finest private collections of Greek and Roman numismatics.

The 166 objects in the exhibition span more than 3,000 years, from approximately 700 B.C. to 400 A.D., a period which encompasses archaic Greece and Etruria, the Hellenistic kingdoms, and the Roman Empire.

It is the epoch that witnessed the shift in political power from Athens to Rome and the establishment of a new eastern capital in Constantinople in 330 A.D.

The exhibit organized and circulated by the Kimbell Art Museum, Fort Worth, Texas, is traveling to only four cities.

A full-day symposium on the exhibition will be held at the Detroit Institute of Arts Saturday Feb. 25. Organized and moderated by William H. Peck, the museum's curator of ancient art, it will offer an opportunity to hear scholars in the fields of ancient ceramics, sculpture and numismatics.

Participants will be Dr. Theodore V. Buttrey, department of classics, the University of Michigan; Dr. Jiri Frel, curator of antiquities, J. Paul Getty Museum; Arthur Doughty, associate curator of antiquities, J. Paul Getty Museum; and Dr. Margaret Ellen Mayo, curator of ancient art, Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

For reservations and information, write or call the Department of Ancient Art, the Detroit Institute of Arts at 833-7875.

Accompanying the exhibition is a 330-page scholarly catalog documenting each item.

The exhibition is open to the public without charge during regular museum hours, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday.

Fireside set

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (LDS) will host a fireside discussion at 7 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 26, in Livonia Chapel, at Merriman and Six Mile. The fireside discussion is open to all interested persons in all surrounding communities without charge.

Terry Robrecht will discuss how to become a better parent by developing listening skills. He has a master's degree in social work from the University of Utah. He is a father to six and is currently director of LDS social services in southeast Michigan.
