

Young musicians make Orchestra Hall debut

The two-year old Metropolitan Youth Symphony will make its premiere performance at Orchestra Hall at 3 p.m. Sunday. For most of these aspiring young musicians, this is a long-awaited moment.

The 200 members of the Youth Symphony, from 40 communities in the Tri-County area, are divided into three groups. Thomas V. Course will conduct the Symphony Orchestra, Douglas Bianchi will be on the podium with the Concert Orchestra and Judith Culler will handle baton duties for the String Orchestra.

Former Youth Symphony conductor, Leif Bjaland, will return from his graduate studies at Yale University to conduct "Procession of the Sardar" from Ippolitov-Ivanov's "Caucasian Sketches." The concert, a fund-raiser for the Youth Symphony, will include works by Humperdinck, Beethoven, Massenet, Schubert, Bizet and J.S. Bach.

The Youth Symphony has twice sponsored a scholarship competition for its members. Last year the 12 winners were awarded $1,200 in cash prizes to be used for private study, music camp or instrument up-grading.

Metropolitan Youth Symphony Orchestras participated in community festivals in Livonia and Southfield and played before community groups in Farmington.

Tickets for the Orchestra Hall concert are $5, $8 and $10. For information, call the box office, 833-3700, 11:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday.

Alexander Miller of Bloomfield Hills, foreground, principal oboe, also plays English horn. Pictured with him are Rebecca Chung of Troy and Beth Brygelson of Livonia (center), both flutists. Beth is principal flute with the symphony.
