

OU's 'Hippopotamus' will visit Kenbrook

A "Hippopotamus Sandwich" is on the menu of elementary schools throughout the metro area this month, brought by a dance and musical theater group from Oakland University. On the three-week tour, "Other Things & Company" will stop with their "Hippopotamus Sandwich" at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday,

May 15 to perform for students in Kenbrook. The program is designed for 5-12 year-olds with music and dance that provide fun, fantasy and imagination to stimulate children's interest in poetry and its creative interpretation. The five singers and dancers and one musician who make up the company were auditioned for the touring show and received a scholarship when selected. The show was assembled by Carol Halsted of the university's department of theater and dance, who is its director. Kristy Mitchell is assistant director and Jim Holdman composed the music. Louisa DeFelder prepared the costumes. The show is based on the poetry of Sergei Slavovetski, set to music. In addition to performing, cast members are prepared to conduct classroom workshops in creative dance or music upon request.

Cook-off winner

ADAMSKI has seen chill competition from both sides, having served as a judge seven times at local competitions. Being a judge is not always a pleasant task, especially in the early going when the good chills are being needed out from the heat. "You'd be surprised at what people do to food to ruin it," Adamski said. "In Canada once I was one of eight or 10 judges. They voted that one of the contestants should never be allowed to compete in competition again. I had to spit it out it was so bad."

per cup. But you don't have to go to a chili cook-off to taste Adamski's Original Sin. He has started bottling his recipe as a chili mix. The powder is sold at several local meat markets and at Rafal's Spices at Eastern Market. Or you can get information about ordering Original Sin by mail by writing Adamski at Packaging Supply, 32473 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.
