

cable connection

Memories, reminiscent renderings of moments gone by, our community access producers and hosts certainly are creating such activity for us.

Jody Antablin, Mary Pat Maloney, Tony Jozwiak and Barb Majoris are featured this week. Each surely has had feelings mixed with excitement and apprehension. Thoughts such as "What in the world am I doing this for?" have been shared by most. Then when the cable television show is aired, what a wonderful feeling of satisfaction.

Why would you become involved with community access programming? Have you ever wanted to:

- Work a camera.
- Create special effects.
- Host a talk show.
- Create a movie for TV, a drama or a comedy.
- Try something different.
- Meet interesting people.
- Volunteer for a worthwhile cause.
- Increase your career potential.
- Learn something new.
- Have a lot of fun.
- Accomplish a goal.

Channel 12 is meant to be your channel to seek out your creative energies. Please share with us in "The Making of Memories."

Tune in for the Duel of Knowledge game show. Metrovision broadcast its first community access program at 6 p.m. Monday, April 30 on Channel 12. The Duel of Knowledge is an eleven-game series formed for community involvement and aimed to give bright students the opportunity to be on cable television.

Five area high schools participated, local business lent their support and community volunteers crewed the shows.

Cite McCallum as top safety pro

Nell McCallum, manager of Occupational Safety, Health and Workers Compensation for Chrysler Corp., has been named the "Safety Professional of the Year" for 1984 by the Michigan Safety Conference.

The Farmington resident was presented with the title and a certification plaque at the recent 84th annual conference held in Lansing, attended by more than 3,500 people interested in, and involved in, the areas of safety, health and workers compensation. McCallum is past president of the Safety Council of Southeast Michigan and Greater Detroit chapter of the American Society of Safety Engineers.

as well as a recipient of the Outstanding Service Award and past chairman of both the Power Press Section and Industrial Council for the National Safety Council.

He is participating with various federal agencies that help develop OSHA standards. He has worked to enhance the image of the safety profession and his intense sense of ethics has been noted by all areas of the business community. McCallum is also a past president of the Michigan Safety Council and the Michigan Safety Council Conference which has been in existence for more than 60 years.
