

Seniors beware

Elderly can prevent falling prey to criminals, scams

By Jackie Klein
staff writer

The three "A's" — alertness, awareness and avoidance — can help prevent senior citizens from becoming victims of crime.

That's the advice of Martha Swick, a crime prevention practitioner with the Southfield Police Department's Crime Prevention Bureau.

Swick spoke to about 125 seniors last week at the Jewish War Veteran's Building in Southfield. Her presentation — "Self Protection and Crime Games Directed Toward Senior Citizens" — was sponsored by the JFW Women's Auxiliary.

"The best advice seniors should remember is to take away criminal opportunity through using alertness, awareness and avoidance," Swick said.

"And they should also be mindful that con artists prey on the three G's — gullibility, greed and goodness. It's the old getting something for nothing scam that's often played on elderly people."

Swick gave pointers on safety at home, while shopping and while banking.

"Never open your door to someone you don't know," she stressed. "Use peepholes or windows to see who's ringing your doorbell. Don't rely on chain locks."

"Always lock your door and consider dead bolts. And be sure to check the identification of people who come to your door. This is the season for home improvements, and it gives rise to scams."

CON ARTISTS often go to the homes of senior citizens under the guise of being code enforcement officers, Swick said. They tell elderly homeowners that their roofs need to be brought up to code and recommend a friend who is in the business.

"The friend," usually charges too much and in most instances the roof doesn't need repairs, Swick said.

Last year, three bogus repairmen took $240 from a Southfield couple in one of a number of scams which have been reported in the city.

According to police, three men in a pickup truck stopped at a home one Saturday and told the 65-year-old resident they could fix the chimney for $10.

The so-called repairmen managed to get the man and wife out of the house to see how badly the chimney job was needed. One man asked if he could go inside to get a drink of water. Instead, he went through a closet and helped himself to $20 in cash.

In another scam, a man offered a free inspection of a chimney flue and found it in need of repair. He told the elderly homeowners he could fix it cheaply.

But instead, he dabbed some paint around the flue, sprayed it with silver paint and charged more than $100.

When seniors go shopping, they should try to shop with a friend, Swick advised.

"WOMEN OF all ages should park in lit areas, always lock their cars and carry their keys in their hands. They should always remember where they parked the car. Walking aggressively and being aware of your surroundings are also important."

The old pigeon drop game is still popular, Swick said, and elderly shoppers are often the targets. A pigeon is one who is easily swindled and very often older women are the dupes.

In one incident, a 70-year-old shopper at the Tel-Tel Mall was approached by a woman who asked her if she knew the location of a certain department, police said.

The two women got into a conversation and were joined by a third woman who said she had just found a bag containing $20,000. She told the other two she was willing to split the loot if they would go to the bank and withdraw $700 to "cover" the cash.

The first woman turned out to be the victim or "pigeon" and the other two were involved in the scam. The victim withdrew $700 and turned it over to the pair of con artists.

The two women told the victim to wait in the bank, and they would pick her up in their car. The pair vanished with the pigeon's money.

WHEN IT comes to banking, Swick strongly recommends that seniors have their Social Security checks sent to the bank for direct deposit instead of to their homes.

"Never carry large amounts of cash when going to the bank and don't advertise that you have cash. Banks are also often the scene of pigeon drops."

"Be aware of con games at the bank. Two con artists may tell a victim that they found a large amount of money and they want to share it if the pigeon will dip into her bank account."

"Another scam is when a bogus bank official tells a victim he's trying to catch a teller suspected of stealing, and he asks the pigeon to withdraw money as evidence. That's where the goodness part comes in."

Mercy conference deals with police stress

Although police officers often appear calm, cool and collected, they often wage a battle with daily stress that affects every area of their lives. Mercy College of Detroit is offering a one-day workshop designed to help police administrators, chaplains and police officers and their spouses understand and deal with the pressures of law enforcement.

"Police Stress: Sources and Solutions," will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Friday, May 18, in the Mercy College Conference Center. The workshop is offered through Mercy's Office of Continuing Education.

Topics to be discussed will include how to identify types and sources of stress, myths about sources of police stress and practical solutions for both police officers and their spouses on how to cope with job-related pressures.

Registration deadline is Friday, the fee is $40, which includes registration, materials, lunch, and refreshment breaks. The official withdrawal deadline is Friday. There will be no refunds after that date. A $6 fee will be charged to process withdrawal refunds.

Mercy College of Detroit is at 8200 W. Outer Drive at the Southfield Freeway, just south of Seven Mile in northwest Detroit.

For more information and to register, call Mercy's Office of Continuing Education, 592-6224.

The four speakers for the day are: R. Douglas Joy, Ph.D., assistant professor, Criminal Justice Studies, Mercy College of Detroit; Thomas M. Kelley, Ph.D., licensed psychologist and assistant professor, Acting Chair Department of Criminal Justice, Wayne State University; Daniel E. Kennedy, Ph.D., associate professor, Criminal Justice, University of Detroit; and Christine M. Panyard, Ph.D., licensed psychologist in private practice, Director of Clinical Services, Multi Resource Center Inc., Southfield.

This program has been approved for a Continuing Education Unit by Mercy College of Detroit. All participants will have a permanent record of these CEUs on file at Mercy College.

INSURING MICHIGAN'S FUTURE

"The demand for electricity in the United States closely tracks our economic activity. If our economic output increases, the consumption of electricity goes up. If our economy is stagnant, the demand for electricity stays flat. It's been that way for more than fifty years."

Dr. Chauncey Starr,
Vice Chairman
Electric Power Research Institute

POWER TO GROW

Electric use grows at a rate approximately equal to the growth rate of the Gross National Product. The two track side-by-side. One cannot grow without the other. Careful studies of that relationship since the 1973 oil embargo have demonstrated conclusively that economic activity and electric consumption are linked more closely today than ever before. As our economy grows, so grows our electric use.

In a previous message on these pages we discussed the issue of electric energy supply in Michigan and how we must increase that supply by completing ongoing construction projects. As you have almost certainly read or seen, not

ENERGY DEPENDENCE?

Is that the way we plan for the future in Michigan? Is that the rational course of action when our nation's energy needs are so high that we can get by for a number of years with just the generating plants we have operating and completed and returned into the grid today. But think a minute. If electric consumption in our state is not going to grow appreciably into the 1990s, as some sources suggest, then we would control our own destiny. We would control our own energy future. At Consumers Power Company, we've been providing power to our customers who rely on us for their energy needs for over a century. We've been a part of Michigan's growth and development. We've been a part of the state's energy future. We've been a part of the state's economic growth. We've been a part of the state's progress.
