

A short course in "Fatigue Concepts in Design" will be held at Lawrence Institute of Technology in Southfield Aug. 7-10.

The course will be beneficial to practicing engineers who wish to improve the fatigue resistance of their products. The program is offered by the University of Iowa in conjunction with the Society of Automotive Engineers Fatigue Design and Evaluation Committee and will be held on LIT's campus, at 21000 W. 10 Mile Road.

Advance registration is required for the sessions, which will begin at 8:20 a.m. Tuesday, Aug. 7, and close Friday, Aug. 10.

Space is limited, therefore, enrollments will be taken on a first-come basis. The $450 registration fee covers instruction, course materials, morning and afternoon coffee breaks, luncheons and one social hour.

For further information contact LIT's Office of the Dean of Engineering, 356-3588.

Farmington Nursing Home residents Carolyn Collins (left) and Joannette Wood gets some assistance from nurse Denise Book and Joseph Mash, nursing home executive director. Residents and staff are collecting refundable bottles and cans for the "Cans for Kids" fund-raising drive for the Children's Miracle Network Telethon. Proceeds will go to the Children's Hospital of Michigan and the C.S. Mott Children's Hospital.

Leslie Karen Schutz of Farmington Hills has been accepted to the Wayne State University of Medicine for the 1984 fall semester.

Schutz, a biology and psychology major at the University of Mississippi, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Schutz. At Ole Miss, she has received awards in recognition of her outstanding academic achievement and has been active in various extracurricular activities. Among these are the Phi Kappa Phi Outstanding Freshman Award, the Academic Excellence Award for female athletes, Academic All-American membership in Alpha Lambda Delta scholastic honorary and Phi Kappa Phi, the highest scholastic honorary at the university.

She also is a member of Alpha Epsilon Delta premedicine honorary, the Lady Rebel M-Club, the Fellowship of Christian Athletes and the Lady Rebel varsity volleyball team.
