

Double bill views human relationships

Two short plays that look at human relationships from different angles will be presented on a double bill from Friday, June 8, to Saturday, July 14, at the Midpoint Studio at the Fourth Street Playhouse, 301 W. Fourth, Royal Oak.

The productions are "The Typists" by Murray Schisgal and "My Cup Runneth Over" by Robert Patrick.

For tickets at $4 general admission, call 543-3686.

"The Typists" presents the irony of life by following the lives and dreams of two co-workers over a period of 40 years. "My Cup Runneth Over" looks at friendship and success through two best-friends-for-life — until one achieves success overnight.

Movie spotlights John Falstaff

Actor-director Orson Welles stars in his own film production "Chimes at Midnight" on the Afternoon Film Theatre series, at 1 p.m. daily through Sunday to the Detroit Institute of Arts repeated hall.

Tickets at $1 will be available at the box. The current series continues through July 15, with a different film each week. For further information, call the ticket office at 833-3799 during regular business hours.

"Chimes at Midnight" chronicles the life and times of Sir John Falstaff, a minor character taken from three of William Shakespeare's plays. Director Welles has expanded Falstaff's role by portraying him as "the most complete good man in all drama," a tragicomic figure whose only flaws are his childlike credence and trust.

This film series is presented by the Michigan 2 Performing Arts Department as a companion activity during the Shakespeare Festival. Tickets are $10.00. For more information, call 833-3799.

Gospel musical to be presented

The Detroit Center for the Performing Arts production of "Tambourines to Glory," gospel show by Langston Hughes, will open a four weekend series run at the Eastern Theatre, 6941 Harper at Van Dyke, Detroit.

Performances will be at 8 p.m. Fridays-Saturdays, June 15 through July 7. A Sunday matinee is scheduled for 3 p.m. June 23 and a Sunday evening performance at 7:30 p.m. July 1.

Tickets at $5 general admission may be reserved by calling the box office at
