 total content and not alone by its title." The court's order — not yet accompanied by a written opinion — put the Apol plan back into effect and set a new filing deadline of July 10. The previous deadline was June 7.

Sen. Nichols commented, "I'm not really surprised by the Supreme Court ruling. I'm an attorney, and I thought the lower court ruling was correct."

Sen. Faust commented, "All the Supreme Court justices should be given milk and cookies and sent to bed. They're sick. The practice has been going on a long time. The same thing (gutting another bill) happened on their last pay raise."

ALTMAN SAID he didn't know what to tell House candidates because he hadn't seen the high court's order.

The court order held the nominating procedures invalid. This indicated House candidates would have to file new petitions or $100 filing fees. Altman said that with new filing deadlines, it might be impossible to print absentee ballots by 21 days prior to the Aug. 7 election. Names must be printed, proofread and corrected, he said. "We're already on a very tight schedule," he said, adding it also would be difficult to get machine ballots out to cities and townships.

Another effect may be the upsetting of precinct delegate elections, he said. Precinct boundaries may have to be redrawn so that they aren't split by legislative boundaries.

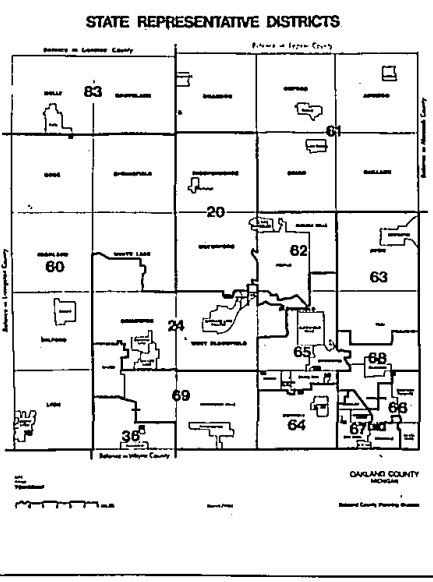

"What the court has done in many cases — and I don't fault them because they're not election people — is that it doesn't take into consideration the far-reaching effects when they make a ruling."

IN NEIGHBORING Wayne County, Clerk James Killen said it might be physically impossible to hold the primary until as much as a month later than the scheduled Aug. 7.

Altman, however, was less pessimistic.

If the primary is delayed, Killen said, the schedule for district and state conventions also would be thrown out of kilter. State Republicans are scheduled to meet Aug. 25-26 and Democrats Sept. 7-8 to nominate candidates for state educational posts and the state Supreme Court.

"And if there are any recounts in the primary, we jeopardize the November election," Killen said.

Oakland County state representative districts have been ruled unconstitutional by the Michigan State Supreme Court.

Clarification

An article about the Farmington Hills City Council members' expense accounts in the June 18 issue of the Farmington Observer should have read that Don Wolf attended the National League of Cities 1982 Congressional Conference and spent $1,102.
