"The Outsider" (1967), 12:27 Friday night on Ch. 9. Originally 98 minutes. TV time slot: last program on schedule.

Darren McGavin can be good or he can be mis-cast. In "The Outsider" he's perfectly cast in the Harry O. mold as a down-on-his-luck private eye. The plot, which involves embezzled funds, isn't too important of more interest is McGavin's character study of humble gumshoe David Ross. Shirley Knight, Edmond O'Brien and Ann Southern co-star in the film — one of the first directed by Michael Ritchie, who went on to do "The Candidate," "The Bad News Bears" and "Semi-Tough," among other pictures.

Rating: $3.10.

"The Love God" (1969), 1:30 p.m. Sunday on Ch. 9. Originally 101 minutes. TV time slot: 120 minutes.

Don Knotts left Andy Griffith's show in the late '60s and made a few comedy films, none of which will be remembered among the ranks of the Marx Brothers or W.C. Fields but most of which are funnier than many more recent, so-called comedies. In "The Love God" he plays a bumbler (what else?) duped into publishing a girls magazine. Knotts' Hugh Hefner take-off, so to speak, is very funny, and Edmond O'Brien and Ann Francis provide steady support. Incidentally, the film's director, Nat

Teddy Roosevelt (played by Brian Keith). John Huston co-stars. "Wind and the Lion" is plentiful in the action department, but it offers more in exchanges between Country and Bergen. Whose relationship begins with contempt and evolves into one of mutual respect.

Rating: $3.15.

"Run a Crooked Mile" (1968), midnight Tuesday on Ch. 9. Originally 100 minutes. TV time slot: last program on schedule.

"Run a Crooked Mile" is the best film Marjorie Teller Moore made from the time she left the Dick Van Dyke show until she co-starred in "Ordinary People." That's not saying a lot, because Moore made some awful films during that time, so here's more of a mouthful: "Crooked Mile" is as good as "Ordinary People." Different, too. This one's full of amnesia and intrigue, murders and manipulators of the international gold standard. It's all a bit far-fetched but wonderfully executed in the hands of director Gene Levitt and co-stars Moore, Louis Jourdan and Wilford Hyde-White.

Rating: $3.
