Area artists share in Toledo exhibit

Bloomfield Hills sculptor Michael Hall is one of more than 30 artists represented at the "Citywide at the Toledo Sculpture Exhibition" in Toledo through Oct. 14.

Hall's work, "Still Life with Three Plates," 1984, is on display at the Toledo Museum of Art.

Some of the sculptures in the exhibition are in Toledo's downtown area such as those by Dale Eldred, Nancy Graves, Penelope Jencks, William King, Tom McGlauchlin, Clement

Meadmore, Louise Nevelson, Jerry Peart, George Rickey and Klara Sever.

In addition to Hall, the artists whose works are in the museum are: Slah Armanjan, Alice Aycock, Lynda Benglis, Deborah Butterfield, Jim Dine, Mark di Suvero, Robert Graham, Duane Hanson, Donald Judd, Sol LeWitt, Robert Morris, Claes Oldenburg, Lucas Samaras, George Segal, Joel Shapiro, Charles Simonds, David Smith and Kenneth Snelson.

IN THE CROSBY Gardens there are works by Alice Adams, Richard Hunt, Robert Stackhouse and Ernest Tunt.

A free "Go Sculpt-Touring" brochure contains a complete list of the exhibition's artists, works, programs and a map designating the location of each sculpture as well as a listing of 27 additional permanent sculptures already on view in the city.

A brochure is available at the sponsoring organizations, downtown and the Toledo Lucas County Public Libraries. A fully illustrated catalog will also be available.

The Hall sculpture is on loan from the Hill Gallery of Birmingham. The Donald Morris Gallery of Birmingham loaned "Switchback," a welded bronze by Clement Meadmore. "Noon Bridge," by Slah Armanjan, stained balsa wood, was loaned by Gilbert and Lila Silverman of Southfield.

Treasures offered between book pages

For those who respect the power of the printed word and the magic of a tale well told, treasures between the pages of books will be available at the 23rd annual used book sale of Brandeis University National Women's Committee.

Preview night of the sale will be from 9:30 to midnight Wednesday, Aug. 22 at Tel-Twelve Mall, Telegraph at 12 Mile, Southfield. Admission is $3. Advance tickets for the preview may be purchased from Brandeis volunteers at the mall on Wednesday afternoon.

Admission is free for the remainder of the sale, Aug. 23-29.

The mall will be transformed into a gigantic library with more than 100,000 books on every imaginable subject in many genres on sale.

The Brandeis committee offers a number of services through the sale. They recycle books at reasonable prices, and donate leftover books to various social service agencies.

This year, books remaining from the sale, will be donated to the Department of Community and Human Services of Pontiac, Mich.

Overseeing this year's book sale will be Shirley

Weiner, Eleanor Roberts, Helen Lipton, Barbara Mellon, Josephine Mellon, Thelma Diamon, and Irene Crane, president.

Beneficiary of the Brandeis Used Book Sale are the Brandeis University Libraries which circulates about 250,000 books each year.
