cable connection

By Lark Samouelian
special writer

Steve Barnaby's Crackerbarrel Debate brought to mind one of the most exciting qualities about local programming. This quality is that age and status is of no importance on cable other than to enhance one's programs by being able to bring one's personal experiences alive to enrich other's lives.

Who really wants to retire anyway? Sure, we may not want the same routine and be thankful for the opportunity to have the old nine to five shelved, but retire our minds? Never.

Our nation is built on pioneers and every one of us has spurred this heritage on. As in the oriental cultures where the seniors are honored, finally our fast lane USA has an easily accessible communication path for us to enjoy and respectfully share in the wisdom and sense of humors of family members.

Then, once in the studio, status becomes relevant only as a member of the crew, producer, camera technicians, floor manager, director, technical advisor, audio, etc. Fulfillment is accomplished by producing a show through team effort which successfully sends the intended message to the appropriate audience.

It is really through the giving of oneself that enriches so many lives, and thanks to cable television, everyone may participate.
