

Levin, Murphy gear up for tough campaigns

By Kathy Parrish
staff writer

For months, they've been on the sidelines quietly watching the game.

Now the candidates are all in there playing — for keeps. Just as soon as the primary flurry was over, incumbents Sen. Carl Levin and Oakland County Executive Daniel Murphy furiously hit the campaign trail. Within hours, their bumper stickers and literature were all over town.

Although neither faced primary opposition, both made it very clear they're not taking anything for granted between now and voting day, Nov. 6.

"It's not going to be an easy campaign. It's not going to be an easy victory," Levin told Democratic supporters at a Southfield party on primary night. Wednesday morning he was outside a Livonia plant gate shaking hands.

"But victory it will be in November," Levin predicted.

Targeted as the 'most vulnerable' senator by the National Republican Party this November, Levin admitted he's up against a tremendous war chest.

MURPHY, A Republican who is being challenged by Sheriff Johannes P. Spreen, kicked off his campaign for a fourth term Thursday at a birthday party in his honor.

Billed as an old-fashioned political rally, the event in the Silverdome's Main Event started up the politician's re-election campaign.

Spreen's campaign plans have not yet been announced, but he is expected to start his challenge Labor Day weekend.

Cherished by Republicans as well as a few "Democrats for Murphy," the executive asked them not to underestimate his opponent.

"He is a Democrat with great name recognition," said Murphy, adding that Spreen has "concentrated on that name identification."

"That's all he has been doing. And there are people here tonight because they know I need the help — Democrats for Murphy."

AT A PARTY honoring both Levins — Carl and his brother Sander, who is running for re-election to the U.S. House of Representatives — Democratic volunteers expressed concern over the tough battle the senator faces against former astronaut Jack

Lozans, a 2-1 winner in the Republican primary. "It's going to be a dirty campaign," sighed one Southfield grandmother. "And it makes me sad, because Carl's so honest."

Levin said he eagerly awaits the Lozans challenge. "I'm looking forward to putting my proven record against his promises and rhetoric," the first-term senator said.

Targeted as the "most vulnerable" senator by the National Republican Party this November, Levin admitted he's up against a tremendous war chest.

"We may be outspent but we're not going to be outfought. Victory is going to be ours in November," Levin told the group.

"Some people say it looks like we're running scared. It means we're running hard."

No school entry without shots, says health chief

Children must have proof of immunization before they can be admitted to school, according to the Oakland County Health Division.

"We want to make certain that all children have proper protection against measles, mumps, rubella, diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough and polio," said Dr. Robert P. Loeck, health director.

Michigan has reported more than 400 confirmed cases of measles, more than any other state, this year. Oakland County listed 24 of those cases, Loeck said.

Requirements for entry into school are:

• DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis) — five doses.

• Oral polio — four doses.

• MMR (measles, mumps, rubella) — one dose.

• TD (tetanus, diphtheria) — one booster every 10 years.

Free immunization clinics are held at two county health division locations — 8775 Greenfield, Southfield (call 424-7045) and 1200 N. Telegraph, Pontiac (call 858-1301).

Detroit Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson is honorary chairman of immunization action month during August for Oakland County.
