

Expansion is under way at Man-Han

Manufacturers Hanover Mortgage Corp. (MHMC), the nation's third largest mortgage lender, recently held groundbreaking ceremonies in Farmington Hills to celebrate the construction of an additional corporate facility at the firm's headquarters.

When completed, this additional corporate facility will enable MHMC to continue its growth and national expansion plans, and will give the corporation the space needed to hire more than 500 additional employees at the headquarters during the next five years.

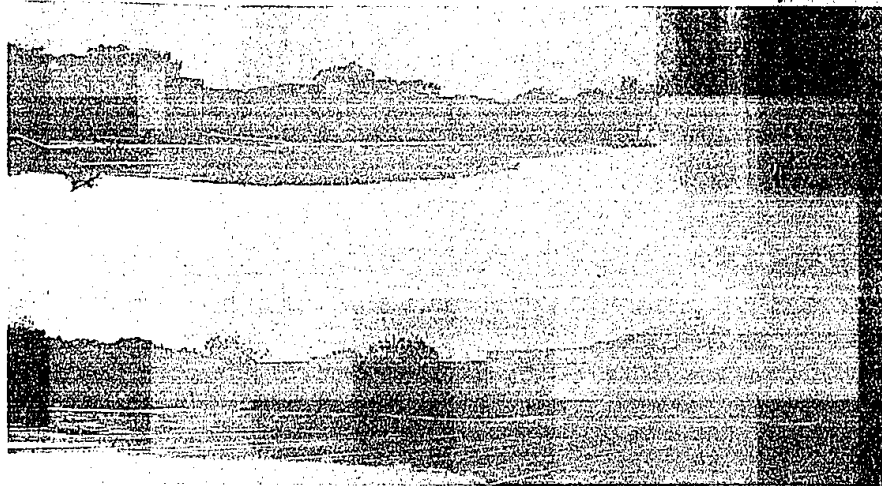

William E. Matzenbach, chairman and chief executive officer of MHMC, told the state and local government and business leaders who gathered for the groundbreaking that the corporation's record growth during the past four years has helped MHMC outgrow its current headquarters.

The 150,000-square-foot addition is scheduled for completion in June 1985 and will give MHMC more than 375,000 square feet of space at its corporate headquarters.

Matzenbach indicated that this new building will be designed specifically for the mortgage banking business, and will enable the corporation to maintain its leadership role in the industry. In addition to the corporate benefits, he said there will also be benefits for the people of the community.

The corporate addition is being constructed on a five-acre parcel of land directly west of MHMC's headquarters building, which is on Farmington Road, just south of 12 Mile. The architectural firm for the project is T. Rogoy and Associates of Birmingham.

The construction manager is R.E. Dailley and Co. of Southfield.

District gears up for sex education

Lake high schools, Trinklwalder said it is not unusual to have one or two cases each year.

The third three-week unit in the semester course will be devoted to substance abuse. The emphasis will be on helping students to make responsible decisions on drugs, alcohol and tobacco.

To help them teach this section, Trinklwalder and Craig Auten from Walled Lake Central High School attended a five-day workshop on "Alcohol and Drug Education" at West Bloomfield's Henry Ford Hospital Medical Center. Trinklwalder noted that drugs were not yet a prominent part of the school environment when most current high school teachers were in school.

Therefore, "Most teachers tend not to say anything (about drugs to students) because they're afraid of saying the wrong thing," she explained.

TRINKLWALDER said the ninth grade health teachers also have received special in-service to teach the five-week first unit. Students learn basic Red Cross procedures of cardiopulmonary resuscitation, boating safety and first aid for burns and choking.

The final unit is "Human Sexuality." Students will review the male and female reproductive systems, which are introduced in the eighth grade health class. New topics in the course outline include teen-age pregnancy, methods of birth control and sexually transmitted diseases.

Trinklwalder said she plans to set up some "classroom premises" to be made by her students, promises such as trying to respect one another's feelings and trying not to make sweeping generalizations about the way people should or should not behave.

Central High School principal Gerald Wallace, Western High School principal Richard Smith and Trinklwalder reviewed more than 12 hours of films for the reproductive health course.

In addition, approximately 22 supplemental texts have been identified for use by teachers in this course. These materials will be available for parents to review this fall.

City treasurer Woods calls it a day

It's like keeping about 30 sets of books but it's all in one convenient place," she said.

In addition to being in charge of the computer system, Woods' responsibilities include receiving, dispersing and accounting for all city monies, filling in for vacationing employees and working with auditors during the city's annual audit.

Woods said she was surprised to find how interesting living within a budget instead of trying to make a profit can be.

"I'm beginning to see how close you can come to not going over the budget," she added.

Last year Woods achieved something the auditors said could never be done - a perfect audit.

"That was my goal. I set out to do it and I did," she said matter-of-factly, adding that this accomplishment came from having a good staff and system.

"This sort of determination is characteristic of Woods," her husband, who has a hobby of oil painting with her.

"I'm beginning to see how close you

"People say painting is relaxing, but nothing is relaxing for me. I work at it and my arms get tired and my neck gets sore," she said.

"I don't just sit there and paint," she said. "Anything I get into, I have to put in over my neck - I don't do anything half way," she said.

An artist, a hard worker and a very dedicated to her work, Woods is a very dedicated to her work.

"I'm beginning to see how close you

Woods said her responsibilities in the position are beginning to weigh on her.

"There's a lot of stress being responsible for all the money that goes in and out of the city," she said.

"I don't want to put any more stress on myself," she said.
