

Luck of the draw brings big bucks

Gary Boyd of Farmington Monday night became the first $20,000 prize winner in Wendy's "Where's The Beef?" Monday Night Football Game contest.

Boyd's name was announced as the winner in a random sweepstakes by television and radio star Clara Peller and former NFL standout and Hall of Fame member Dick Butkus during the nationally telecast game between the Miami Dolphins and the Buffalo Bills.

Boyd, 36, a group facility engineer at Chrysler Corp., called the sweepstakes drawing at the Wendy's restaurant at 5388 E. Eight Mile, Warren.

ALTHOUGH NO immediate plans were made to spend the sweepstakes payoff, Boyd said he is considering an addition to his house and a new canopy bed for his daughter, Jessica, 6.

Boyd, wife Debbie, son Schyler, 2, and Jessica, received congratulatory telephone calls throughout the evening, including a live radio interview from Washington, D.C., and a man looking for the Boyds to invest in a Florida land deal. "I guess we have a lot of friends we never knew about," said Boyd.

He said he entered the contest just once. "The contest sounded exciting, but I really didn't give it a second thought once I turned my ticket in," said the winner.

"I was attending a class last night, and when I came home, I saw Dick Butkus and Clara Peller announce my name. I was flabbergasted."

WENDY'S OFFICIALS said more than a quarter-million entries were submitted nationwide.

The six-game, $120,000 contest is sponsored by Wendy's in conjunction with ABC's Monday Night Football.

They know where the beef is. That's the Boyd family celebrating the luck of the draw at last Monday evening's nationally television foot-
