

Symphony's season opens

Julius Chajes and the Center Symphony Orchestra will start their 45th season on Sunday afternoon Sept. 23 at the Aaron DeRoy Theatre of the Jewish Community Center, 6800 West Maple, West Bloomfield.

Chajes organized the orchestra in 1949 and has conducted it for the past 44 years.

Participating in the concert will be the Fort Street Chamber Choir, conducted by Edward King. Solists will be: Annette Chajes, mezzo soprano; Edward King, tenor; Warren Elch, bass; Hart Holman, violinist; David Wilson, harpsichord.

Annette Chajes, a native of Pennsylvania, won several competitions and appeared in concerts and recitals in the East, Midwest and Canada. She is a soloist at Temple Beth El.

King has appeared as leading tenor with the Michigan Opera Theatre and performed as soloist with Detroit Symphony Orchestra as well as other orchestras in Michigan. He is a voice teacher and choral conductor and tenor soloist at Temple Beth El.

Elch, a graduate of Cincinnati College of Music, has performed with various orchestras in the east and is presently a soloist at Royal Oak First Presbyterian Church and Temple Beth El in Birmingham.

Holman is a member of the DSO who often appears in local chamber music groups and as soloist in recitals. He will be heard in Telemann's Concerto for Viola and Strings.

Educating the public is his top priority. In nutrition counseling services, his staff teaches people how to prepare foods. Stop-smoking, stress management, weight control and exercise programs will be available. (The riding hall will be used for an indoor track.)

Research projects by 13 physicians affiliated with the program will continue in the new building. Medical education seminars for doctors and other health professionals are also planned. "We want to define how well people are rather than how sick they are," Stransky said.

Detroit Focus accepts entries

Detroit Focus gallery, 743 Beaubien, is accepting entries for its second exhibition of the season, "Heroes and Idols."

Artists may enter four pieces of work in any media — painting, drawing, sculpture, photography, printmaking.

Deadline is Saturday, Sept. 22. The juror will be ex-Detroit Mayor, who holds a fine arts degree from Wayne State University. He is represented locally by the Felgensohn Gallery. He works and exhibits in New York.
