CANCER. NOT KNOWING THE RISKS IS YOUR GREATEST RISK.

A lot of people think cancer is unbeatable. That simply isn't true. In fact, over two million people have had cancer and survived to lead happy, normal lives.

And not only can cancer be beaten, it can also be prevented.

There are definite precautions that have been proven to decrease your risk of getting certain cancers.

Talk with your physician about how often you need cancer-related checkups.

Ask your local American Cancer Society to send you a free booklet about cancer risks.

Learn the facts about cancer.

And make not knowing the risks, a less risk.

Wayne Dyer

DYER POINTS to scientific research which tends to show that thoughts are spontaneously passed from groups of people to other groups of people though they've never met or communicated.

"If you get a certain critical mass behaving and believing in a certain way, another certain critical mass somewhere else begins behaving in exactly the same way and something has to happen," Dyer says.

"For example, if you get a certain number of people believing there will be a nuclear war, there will be. But if you get them believing there won't be, then it won't happen. I really believe that," he emphasized.

Dyer uses a "magic trick" to illustrate the power of the mind.

"Chew a carrot until it's the consistency of pulp," he instructed. "Then close your eyes and think 'coconut, coconut.' The carrot will taste exactly like coconut. It's weird what the mind can do."

"You can't expect people to just get the message. You have to give them the message. You can't live on your reputation," he said. "Eykla is a challenge. It's my mission."

Dyer describes himself as "persistent, determined and mission-oriented." His next mission, he said, is a book which he's been working on "day and night for six months." The book will be published next September and deals with making the next generation no-limit thinkers.

"Children are really where it's at," he said. "Don't treat your children as if they were apprentice people," Dyer advised. "They're not on their way anywhere. They are right now and now is all we are given."

Dyer said the first step in no-limit child raising is to model what you expect the child to be. "You gotta get the junk outta you," he said.

Next, Dyer said, kids have to think highly of themselves. "Catch them doing something right," he advised.

DYER SAID parents should raise their children to welcome change, get rid of blame, be free of anxiety, learn to be self-disciplined, live in the present and believe in "realness not sickness."

He also advised parents to get their children out of organized sports until the children are 14. "Allow them to play games without rules, coaches, uniforms, and without standings, which only remind them how bad they were yesterday. Let them try things their own way," Dyer said.

As he consulted the hand-written pages of his manuscript, he said that this was the first time he had been interviewed on the book because it is only about half completed, and already it is over 500 pages long.

Dyer's book will also give parents specific ideas on how to instill a sense of purpose and higher values in their children. He said that adults and children should learn to be open to new ideas.

"Nobody knows enough to be a pessimist," he explained. "If you tell an ant to study algebra, just because it doesn't understand algebra, doesn't mean algebra doesn't exist. It just means the ant can't understand it. It all fits together, just as it's supposed to. And just because you don't understand it, doesn't mean it ain't so."

"Be open to everything — no pessimism, ever!"

On Nov. 12, Dyer will be one of three speakers featured at the 17th Annual Masters Congress, at 7 p.m. at Ford Auditorium. For ticket information, call 689-6650.

Volunteer coordinator in resale shop honored

Mary Feezey, the volunteer who coordinates volunteers in Farmington Community Center's resale shop, was named the facility's "Volunteer of the Month."

Feezey helped open The Second Edition in 1980, with the aim of recycling donated or consigned clothing to bring in some extra revenue while at the same time providing shoppers with bargains.

She spends about 10 hours in the shop each week now and oversees the core of volunteers who receive the donations, and mark, display and sell the merchandise.

"Retail business is my passion," Feezey says. "The Second Edition has been great fun and a marvelous experience just in working with all of those who help every week."

She also coordinates the center's annual fall fashion show and every year puts together a traveling fashion show geared for senior adults using fashions from The Second Edition, and models from Farmington Hills Senior Adult Center.

Feezey began The Second Edition with an extensive background in sales. She was top saleswoman in the country for Peck & Peck, and had additional sales experience in real estate.

Feezey is a native Detroit, now a Farmington Hills resident. Her husband, Robert, is retired from Michigan Bell. The couple have two sons, Drew, an importer living in San Francisco, and Michael, a media salesman for WJR Radio.

She also serves on Farmington Community Center board of directors and has been active in its annual fund-raising drives.

The alcoholic family is 2-day seminar topic

Fairlane Health Services Corp., a subsidiary of Henry Ford Health Care Corp., presents "Intimacy, Shame, and Alcoholic Family Recovery" a two-day conference featuring Sandra Smalley. The conference runs from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 9-10, in Mercy Conference Center, Middlebelt and 11 Mile roads.

Smalley is a therapist. In addition to her private practice, she is the director of Dependency Institute of Minnesota as well as a consultant for University of Minnesota's program in Human Sexuality. Smalley has also authored the books "Co-Dependency: An Introduction," and "Co-Dependency: An Intimacy Dilemma."

Topics of discussion include: "The Dynamics of Healing of Shame," "Myths About Intimacy in Families," "Intimacy Structure in Family Relationships," "Environmental Therapy," "The Power of Play in Alcoholic Families" and "The Healing Process."

Workshops will be given on the second day of the conference to focus on the needs of men, women and adolescents within the family.

A conference fee of $110 per person includes lunch both days as well as materials. For reservations contact Elaine Hughes at 271-6550.

Church has homecoming

Unitarian Universalists of the Greater Detroit area will hold its traditional homecoming at 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 11, in First Unitarian-Universalist Church of Detroit, 4605 Cass Avenue at Forest. The service is sponsored by the Detroit area UU ministers.

Rev. John Corrado, Grosse Pointe Unitarian Church; the Rev. Joan Kahn-Schneider, Farmington Universalist Unitarian Church; the Rev. Nancy Doughty, consultant minister for the district; and the Rev. Robert Marshall, recently retired from Birmingham Unitarian.

The theme of the celebration is Unitarian Universalist roots and how free religion uses them.

Speakers will be the two new interim ministers in the area, the Rev. Josiah Bartlett, Birmingham Unitarian Church, speaking on "Three Dimensional UU's," and the Rev. Vernon C. Nichols, Northwest Unitarian Universalist Church, Southfield, who will talk on "Our Roots for the Future."

The 50th year's homecoming focuses on the 50th anniversary of a joined Unitarian-Universalist congregation at First Church, Detroit.
