Looking at facts on gold jewelry offers for "gold" abound both on TV and in print ads. Suppose you are shopping for a gold necklade. You are shown three neck chains of a yel-liw metal. At first glance, they look alike. The style is the same, the color is almost the same, and they are about the same. weight. The big difference is in price.

Which should you choose?

Any one of the three could be a good purchase for you, depending on the quality and durability you want.

• Karat gold — The guidelines extablished by the FTC state that the word gold" used by itself, means 24 karat 14K gold Because gold is a very soft metal it is usually mixed with base metals, to increase its hardness for jewelry. The warst marking tells you what percentage of gold is mixed with the other metals. If 14 parts of gold are mixed with 10 parts in - pars is ignored mixed with 10 parts if have metal the combination is called 14 warst (4K gild - "Solid gold" is not the same timing as pure gold (34K). Solid gold means that the jewelry is not hollow. The proportion of gold in the piece of jewelry is still determined by the karat mark

 Gold-filled — Gold-filled jewelry is made from a base metal that has had lay-ers of karat gold bonded to both sides like a sandwich. Such jewelry may be marked with the karat plus the abbreviation for gold-filled ("12K GF." for example).

• Gold electroplate - Some jewelry has gold deposited on its surface electrolytically. The FTC's jewellry industry guidality. The F10.5 Jeweiry industry guidelines state that this deposit should be termed "gold electroplate" if the thickness is equal to at least 7 millionths of an inch of fine gold. Any coating thinner than this must be described as "gold wash" or "gold flash".
