

Scarves can add pizzazz to any holiday outfit

You've been invited to a big holiday party and haven't anything dressy to wear. There's no need to panic or burden your budget with a new outfit.

Your basic skirt, last summer's cami-sole or tube top and a few oblong scarves can turn you into the belle of the ball without the help of Cinderella's fairy god-mother and her magic wand.

Francesca Saldarini, designer of Saldarini & Saldarini scarves, offers these holiday tips to turn "plain" into "party."

Take a solid-color, oblong silk scarf and wrap your waist cummerbund style. You tuck the ends under or fasten them with a glitzy rhinestone or gem-colored pin.

A matching or harmonizing oblong scarf becomes a floppy bow at your neck — and who could guess that your skirt worked in the office and that your top did double duty at the beach last summer?

YOU COULD choose a small, silk bow tie instead of a floppy bow for the more dressy tuxedo look. The neat man-tailored tie will be a dramatic contrast to your bare shoulders.

For an equally glamorous but more covered-up look, Saldarini suggests a sheer black shawl with jewel-toned blocks of hand-painted velvet or a shadow-striped silk shawl. Think how much pizzazz these shawls could lend to a basic black dress. Wear the point in front, dipping down to the waist or drape it over one shoulder.

Modern-day Cinderellas using scarves to dress up their working wardrobes for holiday parties can use those same scarves right through the season. The oblong scarves will drape at the neckline of a sweater or knit dress and sooth your favorite jeans. A large, dramatic shawl will go to a disco or party anytime of the year. Like the famous glass slipper, holiday scarves are just the right thing.
