Former school bus driver is now practicing law

Lawrence A. Friedman, who once drove a Farmington Public School bus, has been sworn in as an attorney to practice law in Michigan.

Judge James Thorburn, Circuit Court Judge in Pontiac, who was a classmate of Friedman's father, David Friedman, administered the swearing-in ceremony. The senior Friedman sponsored his son at the ceremony.

Friedman's license to drive the school bus here was but one of several driving licenses he held while working

At Hillsdale College, he was a choir manager, headed a fleet of cars that chauffeured dignitaries and became affiliated with the Philadelphia Society, a national political conservative group.

While at Cooley, he worked with poor and older persons.
