Time to shed old hurts, resentments

Your column is I've always intended you, and now that

Dear Mrs. Green:
I am writing this the day after my 61st birthday. I am right handed, but find writing by hand awkward, therefore type everything I can: personal, business, anything to escape using my messy penmanship.

Your column is so interesting, and I've always intended to write to you, and now that I have, I'll be so eager to know how you interpret my writing.

M.G.
Bloomfield Hills

Dear M.G.:
A well-developed intellect is one of the first things I see in your writing. Rapid comprehension often helps you understand new concepts and situations. Other times you take more time to study and analyze matters. Being an independent person, you like to do your own thinking.

When the large size of your handwriting is considered with the total picture, I find a person who is able to see the broad scope. Although cognizant of details, you do not lose yourself in them. You rather enjoy doing things on a grand scale and would be happiest in a position where you could have freedom of movement and be your own boss.

I can't help wondering what has happened in your life, as I can see the dissatisfaction you are currently experiencing. And the guilt and concealment there have a way of zapping emotional energy that could be used in more constructive ways.

Your self-concept vacillates and it seems quite possible you have rarely ever felt you were number one. In new situations you can be rather self-conscious. Past hurts have made you very sensitive to criticism. Sometimes you anticipate ridicule or disapproval when none is intended. You find it difficult to close these old emotional wounds.

You are a caring person who both needs and likes people. But you have developed defense measures of sarcasm and arguing which do not endear you to others.

Why not let the old year usher out these resentments and hurts? Then look to 1985 as a time for new beginnings. A plethora of self-help books are just waiting to assist you. Dr. Wayne Dyer's "Your Erroneous Zones" and Dr. Norman Vincent Peale's "The Power of Positive Thinking" are both marvelous for this.

If you have a question about your handwriting, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this newspaper. Please use a full sheet of white, unlined paper writing in the first person singular. Age and handedness are also helpful. Time does not allow Mrs. Green to send out personal replies.
