Continued from Page 4

• Jim Ellis, who served on the Farmington Hills Zoning Board of Appeals since 1975, was named Citizen of the Year by the Chamber of Commerce.

• Terry Sever squeaked past Ben Marks to win a seat on the Farmington Hills City Council.

Hills City Council. Other election winners included Judge Michael Hand over Ronald Goldstein for a seat on the bench of the 47th District Court, and Sandy Brotherton, who won a sixth term in the Michigan House of Representatives.

• A loser in the election was a proposal which would have amended the city charter so that an additional 1.5 mills could be levied for capital improvements. Farmington Hills voters turned it down by a 2-to-1 margin.

• The Farmington area, as expected, was very much a part of the Republican landslide in the 1984 presidential election as Ronald Reagan became only the third president in history to win more than 500 electoral votes.

• Defeated in the Farmington Hills Council race by just 25 votes, Ben Marks was awaiting a recount.

• Disgruntled tenants in Bernos-Bentak apartment complexes walked a picket line at Mulwood apartments in Farmington Hills to protest rent hikes as much as 32 percent in the last 28 months.

• Richard Marinucci was named Farmington Hills' new fire chief. Marinucci had been a lieutenant in the Hills Fire Department.

• Farmington Harrison's football team, unbeaten through 10 games, lost to Dearborn Fordson in the semifinals of the state Class A playoffs.

• Bootlegger's Bar in Farmington was to remain open temporarily despite a decision by an Ingham County Circuit Court judge upholding the state Liquor Control Commission's refusal to renew the bar's liquor license.

• William Prisk, assistant superintendent in charge of finances and services for the Farmington Schools, announced his retirement after 17 years in the position.

• Floyd Cairns, Farmington Hills' longtime city clerk, announced his retirement in a letter to the city council. "It has been a pleasure to serve as city clerk and township clerk for the past 29 years, and I know that I'm going to miss it," Cairns said in the letter.

DECEMBER

• Officials of the Oak Hill Nursing Home in Farmington indicated that they would appeal a $500 fine levied against the facility by the state Department of Public Health in October for alleged patient rights violations.

• School and city officials were at odds over a city proposal to use a state law to provide funds, which ordinarily would be shared by the schools, to improve roads near an industrial development.

• The recount was over and Ben Marks was the winner — by one vote — in the race for the city council seat in Farmington Hills.

• Joan Reynolds was picked to replace Floyd Cairns as Farmington Hills City Clerk. Reynolds had been Cairns' deputy.

• Dressed in uniforms with swastika arm bands and giving stiff-armed salutes, several members of a Nazi group came to Farmington to preach their white supremacy philosophy. The Nazis drew few spectators.

• The former Middlebelt Elementary School, closed since June of 1983, was purchased for $580,000 by a man who said he intends to turn it into a residence for senior citizens.

• Karen Borkholz, a five-year veteran of city government in Huntington Woods, was picked to be assistant city manager in Farmington Hills.

• Work began on a telecommunications center for the Farmington Public Schools.

• Terry Sever, loser in the city council election, asked Oakland Circuit Judge to throw out the recent.

Farmington Hills Police Chief John Nichols was successful in his bid for Oakland County Sheriff in November.
