

Jewish group launches referral service line

Got a question? Who provides kosher meals-on-wheels? Where to go for marriage counseling? Where to send the kids to camp? Where to get services for your aged parent?

On Monday, April 15, you'll be able to get the answers by calling 987-1112. That day the Jewish Information and Referral Service will be started under the auspices of the Jewish Welfare Federation.

Funded by the Max M. Fisher Jewish Community Foundation of the JWF's United Jewish Charities, the telephone service will be staffed by teams of volunteers from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, from the Jimmy Prentiss Morris branch of the Jewish Community Center in Oak Park.

The need for a Jewish information and referral service was identified by the Federation's Task Force on Community-Based Service to the Non-Institutionalized Elderly.

The task force, chaired by Dr. Conrad L. Giles, called for better access to services that are available to all in the Jewish community.

Trained volunteers are prepared to answer inquiries about Jewish agency services and refer callers to appropriate organizations, agencies and institutions that can be of assistance.

Problems from day care to Jewish education, social services to recreational programs are among the many areas volunteers will address.

A professional advisory committee, comprised of Jewish agency staff, has been created to consult with the program director, Norma G. Silver. She has been working with the Jewish Welfare Federation to identify the needs of elderly persons in the community.

The Jewish Welfare Federation has had the assistance of its women's division and the National Council of Jewish Women in the recruitment of volunteers.
