Organize everything with pegboards

Pegboards have been around a long time — in offices, schools and kitchens. Pegboard organizers are perfect for storing small- and medium-sized tools and utensils. Mount one in the garage, the basement or the shed, and it will make life easier and more orderly.

Today, there are dozens of hangers, shelves, bins and jars available to be mounted on a pegboard, creating a comprehensive storage system. A pegboard can be used to make a storage wall that will keep all sorts of items neat, accessible and visible.

For example, the flashlight will be there, so you won't have to rummage around in a drawer or closet when the next emergency occurs. Tools can be mounted on a pegboard, so you can find them quickly and easily. Bins, racks and shelves are available to be mounted on pegboards, and small items, such as nails, washers and rubber bands, can be placed in glass jars and mounted on the pegboard.

Modern pegboard accessories are colorful and attractive. This type of storage is not a major project. Most do-it-yourselfers can buy the board and components, mount the board, hook in the containers, and have it all in operation in a single Saturday morning.

Choose garden site carefully

There are no guarantees in vegetable gardening. But you can improve your chances of success by selecting a good garden site, choosing crops and varieties carefully, and planting at the proper time.

Lee Taylor, Extension horticulture specialist at Michigan State University, says a good garden site is sunny, well drained and fertile. It should have a source of water nearby and, ideally, it should be close to home so you can work in it, check on it frequently and enjoy watching it grow.

Most garden vegetables do best in full sun, so avoid spots that are shaded by buildings and landscape plants. Trees and shrubs will also compete with garden crops for moisture and soil nutrients, Taylor adds.

Avoid low-lying spots where water collects after a rain. Most plants do poorly if their roots spend much time in standing water. Low-lying areas also tend to be the last areas to warm up in the spring.
